OPA Order Halts Sales Of Canned Meat, Fish

Supplies Dwindle; Will Be Rationed With Other Foods Starting in April

Freezing Weather

The Office of Price Administration ordered all sales of canned meat and fish stopped as of 12:01 a. m. today in a drastic "freeze" edict designed to conserve rapidly dwindling supplies.

OPA announced that it took the action at the request of Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard. The canned meats and fish will be rationed when meat rationing starts—expected about April 1—OPA said.

The "freeze" will stay in effect until the rationing program goes into effect. The OPA regulation limited it to 60 days.

Products Listed

Taken off the market by the ruling are the following processed products:

Brains, chili con carne, meat loaf, meat spreads, vienna sausage, bulk sausage, chopped luncheon meats, tongue and potted meats.

Principal fish items affected by the freeze order are canned salmon, sardines, tuna and tuna-like fishes and mackerel, accounting for 85 per cent of the annual pack, with the remainder made up largely of canned shrimp, clams and oysters. Supplies of sardines, anchovies, tuna and crab meat have been cut by lowered imports, OPA said.

Dog Meat Included

An OPA spokesman stated that canned dog meat was also included under the freeze because of the general terms of the order which will be filed with the Federal Register today, but that there was no intention of rationing the canine food. There was speculation that the order would be amended shortly, "thawing" supplies of canned dog food.

"Increasing consumer purchases of canned fish and canned meat," OPA said, "will exhaust current supplies if allowed to run their course.

"Unless these sales are halted, there is a real danger that we will have little or no canned fish or canned meat to consume later in the year."

On Point System

It was emphasized that the freeze on canned meats and fish had been ordered independently of the freeze on sale of canned fruits and vegetables which is slated to go into effect at 12:01 a. m. Sunday.

Both the canned fruit and vegetable program and the meat program will be on the "point system," using War Ration Book No. 2. The fruit and vegetable program will

'Dutch' Bergman Signed to Coach Redskin Eleven

Pro football's champion Washington Redskins have a new head coach, it was announced yesterday, in Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, who signed a three-year contract as successor to Lieut. Ray Flaherty.

Bergman, with a 20-year college grid coaching background, including 10 years at Catholic University, will assume his new position after winding up his affairs at the RFC. Bergman was scout for the Redskins last year.

Turk Edwards signed yesterday for another year as assistant coach, while the Redskins may sign Wayne Millner as end coach, pending the latter's Navy application.

D. C. Cars Show 36,511 Decrease

A decrease of 36,511 passenger cars in the District registered in 1942, as compared with the year before, was disclosed yesterday by the National Association of Automobile Dealers. In 1941 there were registered 178,137 cars and last year 140,626, a drop of 17.9 per cent. There was also a small drop in the number of trucks.

2 Accused Of Selling Ungraded Beef

Kilshimer Brothers' Proprietors Win Release in Bail

Two men who operate a slaughter house and wholesale meat firm were arrested late yesterday in what the District Attorney's office said was an attack on black market operations.

The men were Ferdinand and Bernard Kilshimer, operators of the firm of F. Kilshimer Brothers at 1901 Bladensburg Road. The arrests follow an investigation by Henry Brickman, acting chief enforcement attorney for the District OPA.

Customers Mulcted

United States District Attorney Bernard Margolius claimed that the violations of OPA regulations were District-wide and said residents here have been mulcted out of hundreds of thousands of dollars in surpluses they had paid for meat.

Margolius said that beef, ordinarily sold at top wholesale prices, had been jacked up as high as $7.50 a hundred pounds and that the public had paid the black market "anywhere from two and a half cents to more than 12 cents a pound in tribute."

Specific charge against the men was delivery and sale of ungraded beef to a retail butcher in the Arcade Market at Fourteenth Street and Park Road on February 2 at prices ranging from 2 to 8 cents a pound above the OPA's grade ceilings.

Margolius said that all meat must be graded for several price ceilings and that the ungraded meat was being sold for top quality beef.

The Kilshimer brothers were taken into custody by Federal authorities late yesterday and immediately provided $5000 bonds for their appearance for arraignment.

Their attorney, H. Mason Welch, issued a statement at the time, saying, "Someone is trying to make guinea pigs of these men. They have never knowingly violated OPA regulations and have leaned over backward to keep their hands out of black market operations they knew were going on."

Maximum penalty for conviction of violation of selling meat above ceiling prices is $10,000 fine and one year in jail.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, first lady of China, arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon and was met at Union Station by President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt. She will be their guest at the White House for an indefinite period.

The world-famous wife of China's generalissimo, is was disclosed, came here after spending six days at Hyde Park, the Roosevelt ancestral home in New York.

The time of her arrival had been kept secret, so that the crowd at Union Station was a small one, made up mostly of policemen, detectives, newspaper people, and a contingent from Washington's Chinese colony.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, it was agreed, was as attractive as her photographs would indicate—and then some. She flashed a radiant smile as she emerged from the terminal and went forward to greet President Roosevelt with a "How do you do."

She wore a handsome fur coat, but what kind of pelts went to make it up was a matter of dispute. One girl reporter said it was sable; another thought it was mink, while a Chinese reporter—Joe Chiang—nominated otter.

Under the coat was a black Chinese silk dress with a split skirt. Other items noted by those with an eye for such things were silver and ruby earrings, a net scarf studded with red, green and yellow

The House yesterday made its first major break with basic New Deal policies.

More completely than ever in the hands of the Republican-Democratic coalition and almost wholly out of the reach of Administration leadership, the House:

Sent to the Senate the independent offices appropriation bill without restoring $1,400,000 President Roosevelt sought for his National Resources Planning Board—a death sentence, should the Senate concur, as this central postwar planning agency would be without direct appropriation after June 30.

Cast an impatient vote for swifter liquidation of one of the key agencies with which the New Deal nearly a decade ago battled depression and launched an era of unprecedented Government spending.

On a 224-to-157 recorded vote, the House slashed $3,831,466 from the appropriation for the coming fiscal year of the Home Owners Loan Corp., an agency created by Congress in June, 1933, to refinance mortgages of literally millions of distressed home owners.

The intent of this Republican-inspired action was made clear to the House by Representative Dirksen of Illinois—"to force a rapid liquidation of the corporation" and to "get Uncle Sam out of the mortgage business."

Thirty-four Democrats, almost all of them from the South, joined a solid block of Republicans in vot-

Resurgence

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), Feb. 18.—Smashing heavily at German troops along a path of retreat covered with Nazi bodies, the Russians have driven 36 miles to the northwest of Kharkov to seize Bogodukhov on the Kharkov-Sumy railroad, the Soviets declared early today.

The Red army winter offensive pounded ahead on a 400-mile front from above Kursk to Rostov, with heavy blows struck at "the remnants of the routed German units" near Kharkov, the midnight communique said, adding that "the Hitlerite path of retreat is covered with the bodies of dead enemy officers and men as well as abandoned German heavy and light arms."

The fall of Bogodukhov leaves open only the Poltava-Kharkov Railroad for the Germans in their retreat to the west, and the Russian drives in the Kharkov region were reported still developing.

Other Towns Captured

Soviet soldiers also captured Graivoron, 20 miles north of Bogodukhov, while to the south in the Donets offensive the Red army seized vital Slavyansk, railroad junction on the Lozovaya-Donbas Railroad, and 60 miles north of the German stronghold of Stalino.

(The Germans were losing heavily in equipment in their retreat from Kharkov, the midnight communique reporting that one Russian formation alone in three days "destroyed 70 German tanks, 11 self-propelling guns, and a large number of troop carriers and trucks. Men of one of our units captured a plane, 9 tanks, 16 aerosledges and several dozen trucks."

Offensive Rolls On

The powerful Soviet offensive was reported rolling forward against stubborn German resistance on a broad front from the Kharkov area to north of Kursk.

West of Fatezh, northwest of Kursk, said the midnight communique, Russian troops "which crossed a water barrier broke into a large populated place and, after stubborn fighting captured it," killing over two companies of Germans.

North of Kursk "our troops continued their offensive and captured a number of populated places. Under the blows of our units the enemy troops are retreating with heavy losses," and in one sector "1300 Germans were accounted for in two days."

More than 400 Germans were reported killed in an advance near Graivoron that carried into a big populated place where the Germans were dislodged in hand-to-hand fighting.

In the Donbas fighting, the Russians also captured Rovenki and American submarines have sunk five Japanese ships in recent Pacific operations, have probably sunk another—a cruiser—and have damaged a seventh vessel, the Navy announced last night.

A late communique reported these latest successes of the Nation's undersea fleet in its relentless war on the enemy's vulnerable supply lines. The new "bag" raises the toll taken of Jap ships by United States submarines to 184—128 sunk, 23 probably sunk and 33 damaged.

Definitely listed as sunk in the Navy report were a troop transport, a tanker and two cargo ships, all medium sized, and an escort vessel. Naval officials said the latter was probably a corvette and is classed as a warship.

The damaged ship was described as a medium-sized cargo vessel.

Dates or places of the actions were not disclosed. The com-

Initial Skirmish

Nazi Gains Are Taken Calmly Here

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Reports of setbacks suffered by United States forces in their first land battle with the Wehrmacht in central Tunisia were received calmly and without surprise yesterday in the War Department.

Well-posted officers there pointed out, first of all, that the fight which has lost Faid Pass and Gefsa to German armored forces is not the Battle for Tunisia. It is merely a preliminary skirmish of which there probably will be others.

Military Tactics

This fight apparently was launched by the Germans to secure room for maneuver along the Tunisian coast before the British Eighth Army could crack the Mareth Line and join forces with the American Fifth Army to the northwest. Officers here were not at all surprised that the Germans were initially successful.

They recalled that any army assuming the offensive can concentrate sufficient force to gain a temporary preponderance of strength at any given point along a front. To meet such a local attack is to shift sufficient weight from reserves to the threatened point to neutralize the enemy's greater force and to overcome it.

Weather Is Factor

In Tunisia, uncontrollable accidents of local geography give the Germans the great advantage of excellent interior lines in this maneuvering for position. Back of the German front is a good rail and road net over which troops and supplies may readily be shifted. The

The convictions of three defendants in Oklahoma's widely publicized 1940 communism trials were set aside yesterday by that State's Criminal Court of Appeals.

Sentences of 10 years and fine of $5000 were wiped out by the decision, which nevertheless pointed out that the speed with which the defendants, Allan Shaw, Mrs. Ina Wood and Eli Jaffee, had been convicted indicated the temper of the "community in general."

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Feb. 17.—Marshal Rommel, using two divisions of his veteran African tank fighters and his heaviest armor, has smashed an American counterattack, at least for the time being, and with a fresh 18-mile thrust in central Tunisia yesterday has scored a net advance of some 35 miles in the last three days.

This check to Allied plans and disarrangement of their positions was announced today in an Allied headquarters communique which said armored battles raged all day yesterday in the area west of Faid Pass and were still continuing at nightfall "on the outskirts of Sbeitla," 100 miles inland and about 125 miles southwest of Tunis.

The Germans thus had marked up a gain of about 18 miles yesterday after a check from American counterattack near Sidi Bouzid, southwest of Sbeitla.

Rommel Reported Wounded, Sent Home

London (Thursday), Feb. 18 (INS).—The Daily Telegraph said today it had received confirmation of the report that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was wounded seriously when American bombers raided his headquarters at Sfax, in eastern Tunisia.

The German general was taken to a hospital in Tunis and then transported to Germany by air, the newspaper said.

until a new defense line can be consolidated in the hills near the Algerian border, the United States Air Forces headquarters announced three of its forward air bases had been evacuated. This announcement said some fuel, rations and a few planes damaged beyond repair were left behind.

Rommel's 35-mile drive was launched just after Americans had taken over defense of the area from French forces and before the new

Brooklyn Hero Of Haruna Sinking Killed in Guinea

Somewhere in New Guinea (Thursday), Feb. 18 (INS).—Brooklyn's hero of the Pacific, Sergt. Meyer Levin, has been killed in action in New Guinea skies, it was announced officially today.

SERGT. LEVIN

Levin, one of the Pacific's outstanding bombardiers, was famed for his role in the destruction of the Japanese battleship Haruna on December 10, 1941. It was in this attack that Capt. Colin Kelly was killed.

Levin's fortress was shadowing a Lae-bound convoy when it was attacked by enemy fighters and forced down into the sea off the New Guinea coast. Levin and the pilot, Lieut. Burton Christopher, of Decatur, Ga., were killed.

The same fortress earlier this week blasted Japanese ships in the harbor at Rabaul.

Wilson Takes No. 2 WPB Post Intent on Doubling '43 Output

(Holland Resigns from Smaller War Plants Corp. Page 9.)

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

WPB Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson moved into the War Production Board's No. 2 position yesterday with enormous authority to step up industrial efficiency—as a phase of doing the job of doubling our war production output in 1943.

His chief, Donald M. Nelson prepared to devote more time to broader aspects of war production policy, free of administrative routine for the first time and in a position to look at the whole picture.

The shift in emphasis was believed to have been effected as a result of Nelson's action dismissing WPB Vice Chairman Ferdinand Eberstadt who supervised materials distribution, converting WPB in a straight-line organization with all authority concentrated in the hands of Wilson, one of the country's outstanding production engineers and a former president of General Electric Co.

Under the new set-up which is fast being whipped into formal shape, Wilson, who was an associate vice chairman with Eberstadt will do the bulk of WPB operational work as Nelson's "slugger," with Nelson left free to handle relations with other Government agencies, and Congress and to do longer-range thinking about WPB activities.

Nelson is expected to concentrate on projecting WPB operations into the future, looking ahead to the day when manpower and operations of the civilian economy at "barebones" levels will outrank materials and strategic components as major production problems.

The WPB chief is expected to review the effect of WPB actions on the civilian economy and to advance work on programs to concentrate civilian industries among fewer manufacturers to save manpower.

Nelson has stated frequently that he wants to whip WPB in such shape that he can be an "executive." His friends say that fulfillment of this ambition now depends only on his ability to keep WPB stable. Always an unusually fluid organization and the subject of many "reorganizations," the War Production Board is still not out of the woods administratively, it was said, because the armed services which objected violently to the dismissal of Eberstadt are still

Bolles Relinquishes Position Of Aide to D. C. Defense Head

Post Staff Writer

Col. Lemuel Bolles, former head of the District civilian defense organization, was relieved last night of his position of executive to Defense Coordinator John Russell Young and ordered to report for duty to the commander of the Washington military district.

The move has been anticipated for some weeks, ever since Bolles was stripped of most of his duties and authority by the Commissioners' decision in early January to put the District civilian defense in a regular municipal department under the direction of Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst.

Although no details of Bolles' future status with the Washington military command were released last night, it was reported from the office of Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis, commander of the military district, that Bolles would probably be assigned to some other locality from which a request had been received for an officer of Bolles' experience. Col. William F. Salary Ceiling Repeal Drive Ignores President's Tax Plan

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Capitol leaders last night believed it unlikely that a bipartisan drive to scrap the President's $25,000 salary ceiling would be sidetracked by his appeal to have Congress through a super-tax fix a similar limit on personal profits during the war.

President Roosevelt urged Congress to levy a special 100 per cent war super-tax on all net income, including that from tax exempt securities, above $25,000 for single persons and $50,000 for married couples.

If a tax were established to accomplish that purpose, the President said he would rescind the executive order of last October which fixed the $25,000 ceiling on income from salaries alone, after taxes.

If Congress refuses the super-tax plan, the President said "I hope the Congress will provide a minimum tax of 50 per cent with steeply graduated rates as high as 90 per cent." Exact rates and exemptions to be applied, he said, were matters for Congress to settle.

"I trust, however, that without such tax levies, the Congress will not rescind the limitation and permit the existence of inequities that seriously affect the morale of soldiers and sailors, farmers and

U-Boat Lairs Hit In Record Sweep

Photographs Show Success of Raids, Airmen Declare

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 17.—British bombers and fighters in an attack described by qualified observes as the most extensive night sweep of the war hammered last night at the great U-boat lairs at Lorient in the tenth raid this month and ranged hundreds of miles into Germany, Holland, Belgium and northern France.

The number of planes used in the mass forays were believed to be many hundreds.

"The concentrated" raid on Lorient, at the northern end of the Bay of Biscay on the French coast, was made by a large force of giant bombers carrying loads of the largest bombs, the air ministry announced. And while the bombers were doing their work swarms of fighters made daring attacks on Axis communications. They blasted canals, railways and other transport facilities.

Two bombers failed to return from the raid on Lorient and one intercepting fighter was shot down. They were met by a mass of German fighters of all types, one returning pilot said.

The jubilant fliers declared that photographic evidence proved their persistent pounding of this favorite base of the German submarines was successful. They said a fiery pattern of explosives was laid over the entire port which has concrete pens for 30 submarines.

While the Lorient raid was going on R. A. F. fighters fanned out in one of their most widespread night offensives.

The Air Ministry news service said some of the pilots flew as low as 300 feet over Germany, attacking important gates on the Dortmund Ems Canal. Others smashed at motor vehicles, barges and locomotives. Visibility was reported so good under a bright moon that the airmen could follow their explosives until they were half way to the ground.

One German bomber was reported shot down. All British planes returned from this expedition.

Crews of American Liberator bombers at a station in England claimed a record for carrying out two highly successful raids on the continent in only 19 hours with the same bombers and crews.

The Liberators joined with Flying Fortresses yesterday in pummeling the St. Nazaire submarine base. The same Liberators had streaked across the English Channel on Monday to pound Dunkerque.

Operating over Britain in stronger force than recently, the Germans bombed a place in South Wales which the Berlin radio identified as Swansea. Twelve persons were killed. Three of the raiders were brought down.

Sidelights of War

Industries Of Portugal On War Basis

Lisbon, Feb. 17 (AP).—The Government issued a far-reaching decree today placing virtually all of Portugal's vital official and private institutions and industries under a "military organization."

Official sources disclosed the action was taken "in view of preparing the nation for wartime."

The order allplied to all electrical industries, food production, mining, telephone, telegraphic and wireless communications companies and others of public interest. The decree ordered the immediate incorporation of all such activities and their respective personnel into special brigades within their respective military regions.

In case of the "iminent danger of war" all workers in the industries will be fully mobilized it said.

British Harvest Need

London, Feb. 17 (AP).—Minister of Agriculture Robert S. Hudson said today that British farmers would need 500,000 helpers for this year's harvest, which may very well turn out to be a national emergency.

The alternative to a satisfactory harvesting, Hudson said, would be "prolonging the war, because we cannot spare enough ships for military expenditions, or having the people go hungry next winter."

With any luck in the weather, this year's harvest, he said, would be many million tons greater in weight than last year.

Vasilevosky Promoted

Moscow, Feb. 17 (AP).—Gen. Alexander Mikhailovich Vasilevosky, vice commissar of defense since October, was made a marshal of the Soviet Union today.

As Premier Joseph Stalin's representative he coordinated offensive operations on the Voronezh and southwestern fronts. He was one of 23 generals to whom was awarded recently the Suvorov Order of the first degree for very important offensive action.

Nazi Labor Troubles

Stockholm, Sweden, Feb. 17 (AP). So many Germans apparently have tried to avoid the government's compulsory labor mobilization order by claiming illness tha Fritz Sauckel, Hitler's labor commissioner, and Dr. Leonardo Conti, state health director, have been compelled to take action.

A new German decree forbids doctors of hospitals and clinics to certify whether a person is physically able to work or not. The decision now rests only with doctors associated with Sauckel's organization.

munique simply said the operations occurred in "Pacific and Far East" waters. In the past, however, United States submarines often have ventured into the coastal waters of the Japanese homeland, seeking their prey, once going into Tokyo Bay.

The toll of enemy war and supply vessels taken by our undersea forces has been run up with but light loss. One American submarine has been sunk, three are presumed to be lost because long overdue and a fifth was destroyed in drydock to prevent its falling into the hands of the Japs during their sweep southward last year.

Earlier in the day the Navy reported that American planes had carried on two new raids on Jap bases in the northern Solomons. Three aircraft attacked enemy positions in the Shortland Island area February 15, one dropping bombs on the Nipponese base on Ballale Island about 300 miles northeast of Guadalcanal airfield. One of the United States planes were lost.

The same evening a Liberator heavy bomber with fighter escort attacked the Jap air base at Kahili, 2 miles north of Buin on the southeastern coast of Bougainville Island. One of the American fighters failed to return from the mission.

American front is supplied by excessively long lines confined to a few poor and overworked roads and railways.

In the long run, however, the advantage in communications lies with the Allies under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, particularly in his ability to accumulate munitions safely on land while the enemy must depend upon waterborne supplies dangerously close to the front itself.

The weather, which has held up an Allied offensive for three months, continues to work for the time being in favor of the enemy. At the point where the attack was made the dry season has started.

American reverses in the current skirmishing are due to no lack of equipment or inferiority of equipment or to no lack of competence on the part of officers or bravery on the part of the men. Huge tanks reported to have been used by the Germans were no surprise to United States Army authorities, who have known of them for a long time and have developed one of their own. Limitations of this tank are great, a fact attested to by German tank losses which were reported to have been equal to those of the light tanks the Americans opposed to them.

As far as the ability of the American officers and men is concerned, it should be apparent that soldiers learn to fight by fighting and officers learn to command in battle by commanding in battle. Men and officers both have been given the keenest preliminary training it was possible to give them short of battle, each for his own job, and it may be assumed that officers and men have learned their lessons.

The Germans timed their offensive well and executed it with the precision to be expected of veteran soldiers. It has gained them some advantages, but it has not won the battle for Tunisia.

(London military observers said the Axis threatened to outflank the British First Army farther north, and that it appeared possible Lieut. Gen. Kenneth A. N. Anderson's forces might have to withdraw somewhat without fighting.

(Reuters reported the Allies after their withdrawal in the Faid area were holding positions in front of a series of ridges running northeast and southwest which offer excellent defensive possibilities, but falling back to them would mean giving up Feriana, 35 miles southwest of Sbeitla.

(Military observers said the thrust might be a "preventive attack to beat the Allies to the punch and designed to force the right wing of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's army northward and drive a wider wedge between the Tunisian forces and advancing Eighth Army.

In the southern Tunisia sector, 170 miles distant, however, the British Eighth Army of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery was reported nearing the Mareth line for an assault which might relieve the situation by forcing Rommel to regroup his forces.

American casualties were heavy, it was reported at headquarters, and several American units were cut off by Rommel's divisions, which included some huge new Mark VI tanks. These United States units had not been heard from, but headquarters hoped that they would yet make their way back to the main forces.

(The German communique said "enemy groups which had been cut off on the Tunisian front in the course of our attack there were annihilated yesterday and numerous enemy war material was destroyed or captured." German communiques habitually use the term annihilated in a loose sense, and there was no confirmation of the claim from Allied sources.)

The Allies were now fighting with their backs almost against the Algerian border as the result of the powerful German smash which had now cleaned out the southern anchorages of the Allied line, laid open the British flank 50 miles to the north.

From Sbeitla, however, Rommel apparently was attempting to push to the southwest toward Feriana, 31 miles distant and only 12 miles from the Algerian border.

To the southeast another German column under Colonel Ulm was advancing from Gafsa toward Feriana, apparently against little opposition except severe blasting by flights of Boston bombers, Spitfires and Airacobras.

(The two columns possibly were aiming at a junction at Feriana where they could strike heavily to the northwest across Allied communications connecting the forward lines with the Algerian bases of Bone, Bougie and Algiers.

(London observers, however, said one of Rommel's objectives may have been to destroy Allied supplies laboriously hauled over mountain roads in the past several months for an offensive.

(This view had some substantiation from the German radio commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, who said the German offensive was primarily to "disturb the idyllic state of affairs" in which the American Fifth Army was leisurely preparing its operations.

(Having thrown the arrangements into "considerable disorder," he said, "it is left in the hands of the Axis army command whether it will be satisfied . . . or whether it wants to extend the successes by employing larger masses.

(On the other hand the British Admiralty announced another huge hole had been made in Axis supply shipping with the destruction by submarines of six and perhaps seven ships and the damaging of one other.)

An officer at Allied headquarters, commenting on the communique from Cairo which announced that General Montgomery's Eighth Army was advancing upon the Mareth Line, 65 miles this side of the Libyan border, said Rommel might soon be forced to recall his tanks to meet the southern threat.

May Have All He Wanted

Another headquarters source commented that Rommel may already have got all that he wanted in the current offensive—plenty of elbow room.

The Americans now are using new General Sherman medium tanks. Manning a long line with only light tanks, it was not surprising that the Americans had been forced to give way to a sudden attack by a heavy concentration of armor, a headquarters source observed.

The 50-to-62-ton mark VI tanks which the Germans used have large caliber, high velocity guns and armor belts of about 7 inches. The Allies never have captured any of these tanks for close examination, although they have disabled some.

These speedily pushed through for a gain of 20 miles last Sunday. The Americans rallied in a counter-attack Monday and gained back 6 miles, but were unable to cope with the numbers and weight of the German attack which was resumed yesterday.

(The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded in London by Reuters, said Rommel's forces in southern Tunisia had withdrawn to the Mareth Line "according to plan and without being harassed by the British."

("Strong British tank reconnaissance columns" were reported active.

(The broadcast today said German forces had reached the western brink of the Chott Djerid in the southern area.)

Reds Pursue Foe Past Kharkov

Sverdlovsk on the branch railroad line leading to Gorlovka, 26 and 20 miles off the Moscow-Rostov thoroughfare.

In the Rostov region, where a Russian column has pushed halfway to Taganrog, guerillas led Soviet infantrymen "by little known paths" on to the enemy flank and in a sudden attack the Russians with guerilla aid took two "important populated places," said the late communique.)

The midnight war bulletin named two additional localities captured in the Donets fighting, and said the Germans were offering "desperate resistance." One formation rushed into 11 populated places and "wiped out about 2000 Germans," besides taking "many prisoners" and destroying many German arms.

Stubborn fighting was reported in the Kramatorsk area also, and the Germans suffered heavily in captured equipment, it added.

The Moscow radio reported that Russian troops had cut important communication lines in penetrations to the German rear between Kursk and Orel, and said that the Kuban area in the Caucasus has "now almost been cleared of Germans." The Germans in the Caucasus are pocketed around Novorossisk.

Red flags fluttered atop battle-pitted buildings in Kharkov where dispatches said Storm Troop prisoners filed through snowy streets littered with German dead, wrecked tanks, smashed guns and abandoned enemy equipment.

Poltava, a rail junction 80 miles west of the shattered German stronghold, was the next major Russian objective in the downhill sweep toward the Dnieper River. Soviet troops striking beyond Lozovaya, 75 miles south of Kharkov, also were within 7 miles of Dnieperopetrovsk, another big Nazi base on the Dnieper River bend.

In the Donets basin-Tagnrog sectors the Russians were fighting to close a 7-mile-wide German escape corridor. Soviet forces were hitting from three sides, the north, east and southeast.

On the northern side of this exposed Nazi salient the Russians were fighting toward the coast from Krasnoarmeisk and southwest of Voroshilovgrad. Both these groups were threatening Stalino, now a "bottleneck" for the Nazis since it is the junction of railways leading out of the Donets basin and Taganrog sectors.

The Russian noon communique said 1400 Germans were killed and six enemy tanks destroyed in the Krasnoarmeisk sector.

Wilson Takes No. 2 Post to Double '43 Output

to indicate whether they will "go along" with the change.

Resignation Rumored

Symptomatic of WPB's fluidity was the recurrence yesterday of reports that Nelson might resign, now that Wilson had been designated "heir apparent." Stephen Fitzgerald, WPB director of information, denied the report, stating that Nelson authorized the comment that the report was "completely unfounded," but did not want to dignify it with a formal statement.

Nelson, it was pointed out, informed a staff meeting Tuesday night after he had fired Eberstadt that he hoped all members of his staff would remain, and tha he personally planned to remain until peace comes, unles "someone better" appeared to take his job.

Wilson is now armed with at least two potent weapons in doing his job of increasing war production—two weapons which have received little public attention:

Shift War Contracts

1. Procurement power is vested in the War Production Board by the Smaller War Plants Act, enabling Wilson to rearrange war contracts on his own authority if he finds the armed services balking at any of his directives. Col. Robert Johnson, newly appointed head of the Smaller War Plants Corp., has announced that he hopes to place 25 billion dollars worth of contracts in smaller plants, and it is understood that his placements will be integrated with Wilson's program.

2. By virtue of a special directive signed by the War and Navy Departments, WPB and the Defense Plant Corp., a week ago, Wilson may shift machine tools around from one plant to another in accordance with his orders. The power may have enormous implications since the right to take away a plant's machine tools is the right to pass a death sentence on that business for the purpose of breathing new life into another business which can make better use of the tools.

Procurement agencies—Army, Navy, Maritime Commission—may be directed by Wilson to transfer tools from one plant to another under the order. Provision is made for use of WPB's requisitioning power in the event a manufacturer refuses to permit an ordered transfer to go through.

It is said that Nelson hopes the problem of critical components which are production bottlenecks today may be solved by careful production scheduling on the part of Wilson.

Careful allocation of materials within the available supply has removed distribution of raw materials from the list of major WPB problems. With components under control, addition of new programs stand to cause considerably less dislocation than at present, it was pointed out.

Dairymen Urge Price-Freeze Amendments To Avoid Nationwide Milk Rationing

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Dairymen from 16 States affected by the recent OPA order freezing milk prices paid to farmers yesterday poured their protests into friendly ears of the Senate Agriculture Committee, warning that the ruling will mean a general deterioration of dairy herds and hasten milk rationing throughout the Nation.

They asked amendments of the Price Control Act to prohibit the OPA from placing ceilings on vital war foods "at less than the cost of producing them" to permit protesting groups to take their cases into "the regular courts of the country."

Under the present situation, they charged, they are harassed by surprise regulations, cannot enter the courts, and get the run-around at OPA offices. "Your committee is the only one who has seemed glad to have our side of the question," spokesmen told Senator Aiken (Republican), of Vermont, who was serving as chairman of the subcommittee investigating the country's food supply.

Price Increases Asked

Prior to the price-freeze order, it was brought out, many milk producers' associations — among them the Congress of Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Associations serving metropolitan Washington—had petitioned for price increases to cover increased production costs.

W. R. McCann, economist for the congress, declared dairy production figures in this milkshed area are at an all-time low and that his group is spending $20,000 a month importing milk from other areas.

"At present," he said, "we are importing about 15 per cent of the Washington area supply. Our average cost of production has increased about 43 per cent in the past year. Dairy labor costs have increased about 61 per cent and feed costs about 44 per cent.

"On January 16 we petitioned for an increase in retail milk prices of 2 cents a quart. The Department of Agriculture has been studying our request. The city's population has increased rapidly. We have to supply all the local camps for the armed forces and they're taking our milk to send to Norfolk, Parris Island, S. C., and other places.

Difficult to Understand

"This economic thinking that says we should keep prices down to consumers when everything we use is going up we cannot understand. Since July we have spent $57,000—importing so we can hold on to the market—but this cannot be kept up," he declared.

"In other words, you are subsidizing the Department of Agriculture," Senator Aiken said. "Maybe that is why they believe so thoroughly in subsidies."

Meantime a House committee investigating black markets in meat heard David Ginsburg, general counsel for OPA, describe as "worth considering" a suggestion for Government purchase of livestock and registration of every person who sells meat.

Ginsburg expressed belief that ceiling prices on meat are high enough to allow a "fair profit to the major output" of the packing industry. He contended that prices cannot be raised to the point where they will cover costs of the least efficient producers and keep the meat industry stable.

"Of course you have to raise prices," Chairman Patman (Democrat) of Texas, interrupted. "Something has got to be done and done quickly."

W. J. Kuhrt, chariman of the International Association of Milk Control Agencies, appearing before the Senate committee, said amendment of the Price Control Act is imperative because "OPA has disregarded all the safeguards intended by Congress" and "we think it is now being administered illegally."

Charles B. Holman, representing the Milk Producers Federation, declared farmers are "caught in a squeeze" with feed and labor costs rising. Dairymen cannot stay in business under the order freezing prices at the highest level in January, he declared, expressing belief the OPA "must want milk rationing, the way they're going at this."

A whole series of other witnesses, from New England and California mostly, supported the testimony given by Holman and Kuhrt.

4 Children Killed In Bus Collision

Dardanelle, Ark., Feb. 17 (AP).—A school bus and a truck collided on a one-way bridge near here late yesterday killing four children and injuring a score of others.

The dead were Marritt Banks, 16; Rufus Branch, 14; Rebecca Highland, 15, and Lloyd Farmer, 19.

House Makes First Major Break With New Deal Policies

HOLC obtains its funds from the bill, which the House a moment later sent to the Senate with $4,131,466 clipped from its total under the coalition's prodding.

Including reductions initiated by the Appropriations Committee, and sustained by the House, savings totaled $10,579,672, only a fragment of the $2,616,972,913 which the measure would make available for more than 30 independent Federal agencies.

The Administration was sustained only once in the House yesterday. After an appeal to "reason" by Speaker Rayburn "with all the earnestness I can command" it voted down 162 to 87 a proposal by Representative Case (Republican) of North Dakota, to abolish the Federal Communications Commission by refusing it funds after next June 30.

The Republican leadership was not impressed by President Roosevelt's press conference delineation as spendthrifts, those members of Congress who would abolish his National Resources Planning Board. Dirksen, one of the "minority" bill managers, turned back on a point of order a move to keep the board functioning in skeleton form and under a new name.

There were no funds for the board, headed by the President's uncle, Frederic A. Delano, as the bill came to the House from its Appropriations Committee. There were no funds for the board in the bill the House sent to the Senate.

Representative Magnuson, young Democrat from Washington, attempted to resuscitate the board by offering an amendment to appropriate $415,000—about a quarter of the Budget Bureau estimate—for a "National Resources Planning Council."

Need for Board Cited

Magnuson admitted that a number of Federal agencies are conducting planning activities, but maintained that the Government needed a "clearing house" on planning. He followed the line taken by Mr. Roosevelt that failure to spend a modest sum for planning now would cost millions later when members of the armed forces return from war looking for jobs.

But Dirksen was ready with his "point of order" to the effect that required congressional authorization was lacking for the appropriation Magnuson proposed. Dirksen was sustained by Representative Whittington (Democrat) of Mississippi, who was in the chair.

The Democratic leadership yesterday was mauled nearly as often by Democratic absenteeism as it was by Republicans. Democrats stayed off the floor in droves.

By way of protest, Representative Woodrum of Virginia, who was in charge of the bill, called to the attention of the "people" and "the Democrats of the country" the fact that only 36 Democrats showed up to vote on one question and were beaten by 84 Republicans.

Woodrum, noting the absence of members of his own Appropriations Subcommittee, complained "Certainly they are not helping very much today."

Salary Ceiling Repeal Drive Ignores President's Tax Plan

Doughton Gets Suggestion

He outlined his super-tax suggestion in a letter to Representative Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. This group last Saturday voted 15 to 10 to report a bill which would scrap the White House salary order as a condition for increasing the national debt limit from 125 to 210 billion dollars.

Sponsored by Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, the bill would replace the executive order with a formula permitting high salaries to continue at their Pearl Harbor level if above the $25,000, after taxes, and allowing lower salaries to rise to that figure.

(Under the executive order, and the Disney plan the figure $67,200 is used as the gross amount which is calculated to leave $25,000 net after taxes.)

Disney said yesterday that he intends to report his bill to the House on Monday. Administration leaders in the House generally conceded that it would be passed there by a substatial majority, and that it would gain strong support in the Senate.

However, among members opposed to the President's salary order, there was still sentiment against tying a repeal rider to the debt limit increase bill. A move was also reported to fight the Disney plan on the ground that it would not provide effective control over salary increases up to the $25,000 net ceiling.

Foes of the order have objected that the President used executive authority to fix the salary ceiling after four committees turned down the plan.

The President said that he had issued the order on the basis of the Economic Stabilization law of October. "I could not exercise the discretion vested in me by the Congress to adjust salaries, without finding that it is a gross inequity in wartime to permit one man to receive a salary in excess of $67,200 a year while the Government is drafting another man and requiring him to serve with the armed forces for $600 a year," the President wrote.

Among comments of Ways and Means members were these:

Doughton—"We've got hold of about all the tax matters now that we can digest."

Disney—"If we have reached the stage in American life when we begin to limit incomes, Congress should be the limiting power. The tax on large incomes runs to 88% already. Congress might hesitate to pass a tax statute that is avowedly confiscatory, as suggested."

Representative Reed (Republican) of New York—"The President has lifted a plank from the Communist platform and this is the only political party that has assumed to fix a $25,000 salary as the limit of a man's earnings under a free enterprise system."

Representative Gearhart (Republican) of California, author of the first bill to repeal the President's salary order which was later replaced by the Disney plan—"To use the tax power for the purpose of confiscation runs counter to the Constitution and the American sense of fair play."

Diplomats Moved To Baden-Baden

The New York Times yesterday said that several Latin-American diplomatic representatives in France, removed by the German authorities from Vichy to Monte-Dore, have now been transferred to Baden-Baden, in Germany, where they have joined the North American diplomatic group, made up of United States diplomats, newspaper correspondents and Red Cross workers formerly in Vichy.

The Latin-American party is headed by L. M. da Souza Dantas, veteran Brazilian Ambassador, and includes the envoys of Peru, Ecuador and Columbia. Mr. da Souza Dantas, who has lived 20 years in France, was universally respected. All the files of his embassy were searched as soon the Germans entered Vichy, November 11.

Two motives are seen for this transfer. One is to prevent friendly demonstrations on the part of the French; the other is to hold as many diplomatic hostages as possible in Europe. In these conditions it is believed that the Mexican, Cuban, Guatemalan and Haitian missions still in Amelie-les-Bains in the Pyrenees will soon join the others at Baden-Baden.

China's First Lady Honored White House Guest stones, and black shoes with high heels.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. She wore no hat.

Today, the gallant Chinese woman will journey to Capitol Hill and demonstrate that she has much more than beauty. She will deliver an address in the Senate chamber at 12:15 p. m. and follow this with an address before the House of Representatives at 12:45. This House speeh will be broadcast.

Since Mme. Chiang Kai-shek came here, not as an official guest of the Nation, but as a guest of President and Mrs. Roosevelt there was no pomp attending her arrival—no troops, band music or the like.

Fala to Fore

The informality of the occasion was shown at the outset when President Roosevelt, just before leaving for the station, gave instructions to let Fala, the White House Scottie, go along. Fala rode up front with the chauffeur.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek came to the United States on November 27 by plane. She immediately went to Harkness Pavillion, the Presbyterian medical center in New York, where she underwent treatment for her teeth, sinuses and a 5-year-old back ailment. She suffered the back injury in the early days of the Chinese-Japanese war when an automobile in which she was riding near Shanghai struck a shell hole and overturned.

To judge from her appearance yesterday, the heroine of Chungking succeeded well in her quest for better health. She seemed to be aglow with vitality.

In Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's entourage yesterday were her niece and nephew, Miss Jeanette Kung and L. K. Kung; Dr. Hollington Ton Tong, whose official title is Chinese vice minister of information but who was described by David Lu, Chinese correspondent, as the generalissimo's Steve Early, and Miss Pearl Chen, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's private secretary.

Among those who greeted the famous visitor at the station were Dr. Wei Tao Ming, the Chinese Ambassador, and his wife, and Dr. Alfred Sze, former Chinese Ambassador here, and now head of China Defense Supplies, a purchasing mission.

Last night Mme. Chiang Kai-shek partook of what was described as a "family dinner" at the White House.

During her visit here she will hold a joint press conference with President Roosevelt, and later on will make a speaking tour of the United States, visiting Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco and her alma mater, Wellesley College in Massachusetts.

Job Shirkers Face Draft

Philadelphia, Feb. 17 (AP).—A draft board with supervision over a district heavily populated with navy yard employes announced today that draft-eligible warworkers found to be habitually absent from their employment will be reclassified and given 1-A status.

The decision came after the House Naval Affairs Committee at Washington initiated legislation designed to halt absenteeism among civilian employes of navy yards.

"We feel that an absentee is a slacker working in a defense plant to keep from going into the service," said A. Lincoln Myers, appeal agent for draft board No. 56. "The action will be taken against any absentee whether he works in the navy yard or in a 2-by-4 machine shop."

Some other Philadelphia boards indicated they planned similar action.

An Army-Navy "E" pennant previously awarded John Roebling's Son Co., Trenton, N. J., has been suspended, the Navy said yesterday.

It added that the order was issued February 3 because of loss of working hours by company employes.

No additional details were available.

The awards are given to concerns by the War and Navy Departments for outstanding work on war contracts.

Vote Due Today On Deferment Of Family Men

By the Associated Press

The House Military Affairs Commitee votes today on the Kilday bill to set up draft deferment priorities for men with families. The committee is expected to recommend passage of the bill in the face of Army protests that it would put "undesirables" into uniform.

This objection was registered yesterday by Brig. Gen. Miller G. White, assistant chief of staff in charge of personnel. Telling the committee that the legislation "gives us no little concern," General White said it might force the Army to admit many illiterates and men with venereal diseases.

Contentions Disputed

Representative Kilday (Democrat), Texas, disputed his contentions.

The bill would create four groups for priority deferment and require that all men in one group be inducted before those in another were called. Under these provisions, General White contended, the Army might be compelled to accept men now taken in limited numbers only. The alternative, he explained, would be to "raise our requirements so as to reject all of them and get them out of the way."

He was referring to illiterates, victims of venereal diseases and "other undersirables" of draft age who have not been deferred as a class but are inducted in limited numbers. White contended the bill would make the Army induct every single man before it could take a married man. Its strict wording, he sid, would permit a man with dependents to "simply tie Selective Service into knots by going into court."

Even If Undesirable

His point was that a father called for induction could take court action if, within the State of his residence, there were undrafted single men, or married men without children, even though those men were "undesirable."

Kilday responded that the bill provides that the induction of men by the groups it defines shall be under such regulations as the President may prescribe. Kilday insisted "undesirables" could be put in a deferred class under this provision, pointing out that the deferment priorities in the bill provide that no man in one group shall be drafted while there are "qualified" men in the same State with a lesser degree of dependency.

The deferment groupings in the bill are based on the degree of dependency, without regard to occupation.

Rommel Reported Ill in Germany

London, Feb. 17 (BIS).—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel is seriously ill in Germany, Reuter's News Agency said yesterday in a dispatch from North African headquarters quoting "usually well-informed circles."

Previous unconfirmed reports declared the Nazi general was wounded by a bomb or shell.

Feminine Bravery

Men, Women Share China's Combat Duty

YA-CHING LEE

By Scott Hart

Post Staff Writer

Miss Ya-Ching Lee's eyes are deeply feminine and delicate fingers chose her head scarf but she is tough and brave and don't mistake it.

In May, 1935, a safety belt broke in the plane she flew and landing by parachute in San Francisco Bay she could only comment "I lost my shoe." Here yesterday, on behalf of United China Relief, she said, "There is no difference between women and men in accepting combat duty when their homes are at stake in war."

The thought occurred while talking of the Chinese women who go into the fighting line as fighting soldiers, build roads, cook and wash clothes for the fighting men, perform police duty, in a China where "the situation is getting worse and worse," she said.

"We need planes and medical supplies and other materials," said Miss Lee. Properly supplied Chinese armies will save America's manpower. "We've got the manpower," she said.

The woman with the soft eyes and fragile voice talked for 30 minutes of steel, guns and pillage, of a terrible need of things to fight with but almost shouted, "We'll keep on fighting anyhow because we believe in our leaders and know they're doing what's best."

"Spirit," she said loudly, as if trying to make the word hang, and shiver in the air for no one to mistake. "We're fighting a war with one hand and building a better world with the other, even while the war goes on." Children are being trained as parachutists, pilots are being trained with a view to China's present and future safety. And in the past six years 19 million persons have been educated, she said.

And of how they seem to die so calmly, Miss Lee reflected, "the Chinese think in terms of eternity."

Allied Raids Silence Guns Of Japanese on Salamaua

By William F. Boni

Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in New Guinea, Feb. 16 (Delayed).—A formation of B-25 North American (Billy Mitchell) medium bombers today emulated the strafing tactics of lighter attack planes and on its first combat mission reported blazing success in at last temporarily silencing all Japanese antiaircraft batteries on the Salamaua Peninsula.

Pilots newly trained in tree-top flying which becomes second nature to skippers of lighter Douglas A-20 (Boston) attack planes, first dropped bombs on the Japanese storage area in the Malahang cocoanut plantation which had been hit by three other formations of B-25s yesterday. But there was a difference between the attacks.

This formation—led by Maj. Ed Larner of San Francisco, one of the hottest A-20 men before his transfer to his new command—let loose its bombs from some hundreds of feet off the ground against as many thousand of feet altitude for the previous day's bombing bee. The explosives, after hitting the ground, skittered along quite a distance, plowing up coconut trees before exploding. Their entire demolition strength was exerted above ground.

Then, having completed the bombing half of its assignment, the B-25 attack missicn went on to Salamaua. There was no doubt a lot of startled Japs when these medium bombers, flying abreast, swooped across Salamaua at low level, right through a thick antiaircraft barrage. So accurate was the fire from the planes that, from the instant they opened up, there was not a single return shot from any Jap gun pit.

Jap Bases Battered

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), Feb. 18 (AP).—Allied planes stepped up their activity in the Southwest Pacific, bombing and strafing Babo, Ubili, Gasmata, Salamaua and Lae, the Allied high command announced today.

On the ground, the Japs still were reported falling back from their defeat at Wau, 35 miles southwest of Salamaua, toward Mubo, which is only 12 miles from Salamaua. Allied forward elements harassed the retiring enemy.

12 DIVISIONS

ON THE THIRD FRONT

THE SECOND FRONT is a fighting front. You will find it in North Africa, in the islands of the Pacific, in the air over Europe, or wherever men in uniform are on the attack. They fight with weapons, not words—with a destroyer's guns, with an infantryman's grenades, with a marine's bayonet, or with their bare hands, if necessary. They are prepared to die fighting, and many do just that.

The third front is the home front, and that's where we come in. Our principal weapon is hard work, no matter how we may dress it up with exciting phrases like "scientific genius" and "soldiers of production." The third front is tremendously important, but when the chips are down it is the "fighters" on all fronts, the men who are prepared to die, who must win this war. We know that. But what we must remember, every hour of every day, is that the third front can lose the war—and that makes it important.

In action on the third front General Electric has the equivalent of 12 army divisions—175,000 trained workers who recognize hard work as their weapon and are determined that our men on the fighting front shall not be defeated. There are 50,000 women and 125,000 men in these modernized, fully-equipped divisions. Their battleground is more than 35 million square feet of manufacturing floor space in G-E plants in 75 different communities. From these 800 acres, sown with thousands of machine tools, come turbines, generators, motors, ship-propulsion gears, searchlights, radio equipment, aircraft instruments, incandescent and fluorescent lighting, gun mounts, directors, superchargers, plastics, gunfire control for ships and planes, and many strange devices that have no name, simply because there hasn't been time to think of one.

Every time an American military or naval unit moves into action, some piece of G-E equipment, some example of G-E engineering and research goes along. Thus the third front, which cannot win the war, is doing its best to make sure that the men on the second front will win. And General Electric is doing its best to make sure that the millions who are moving up to fighting fronts, among whom already are almost 25,000 of its employees, are given the weapons they are using so well.

In 1942 these 12 divisions produced a billion dollars worth of war goods, although we realize that dollars as such are inadequate to measure the worth of that fighting equipment. That record will be broken in 1943. And, when the men of the second front come marching home, the machines and the skills and the experience and the determination of the third front will go marching on into the future, to build and inhabit that better world for which our war was won. That will be a real victory, and a real peace. GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY, SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

★ In the next 10 minutes another American plane will be built. General Electric helped America's aircraft industry to build it and test it. General Electric will help to keep it flying.

★ No ship or plane or tank or company of soldiers goes into battle without radio.

★ American industry will launch more than two thousand ships—a ship every 4 hours—in 1943! Many of these will be driven by G-E turbines.

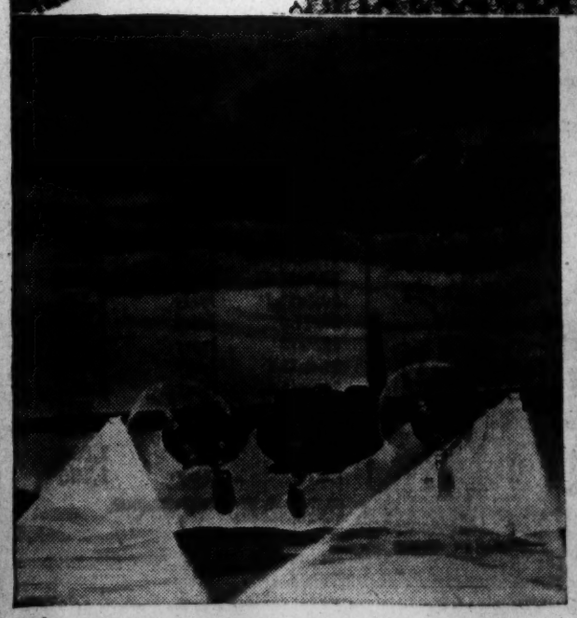
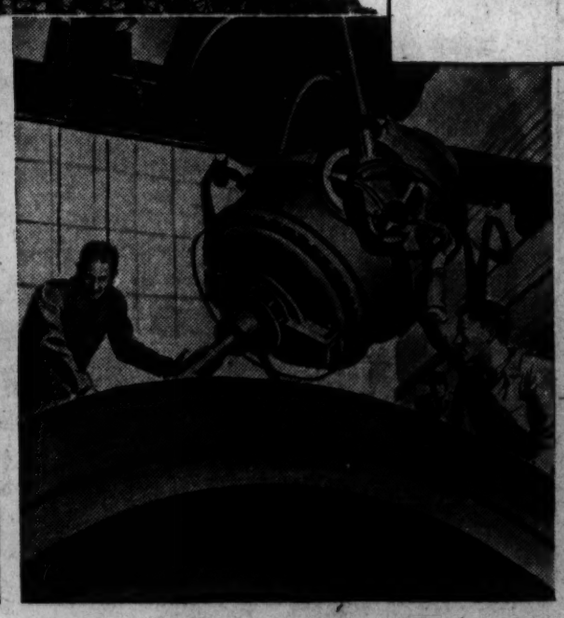
NINE ARMY-NAVY E'S HAVE BEEN AWARDED TO G-E MEN AND WOMEN

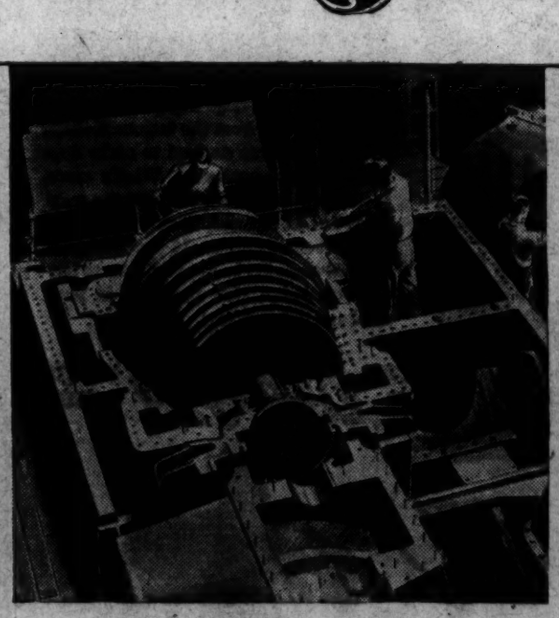
GENERAL ELECTRIC



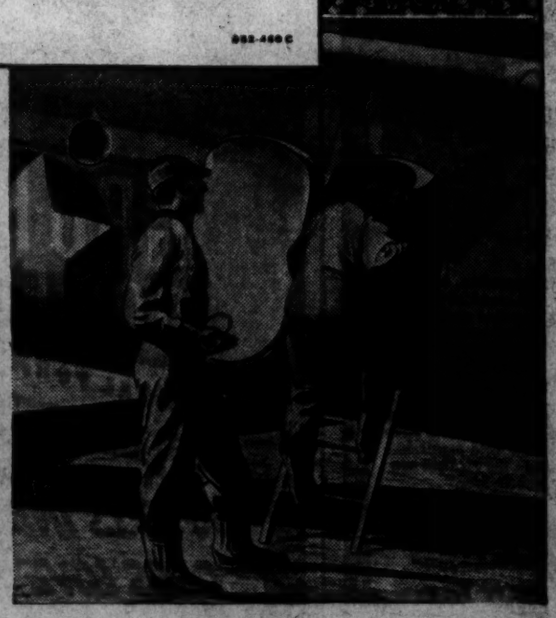
Familiar to every American motorist, G-E MAZDA all-glass, sealed-beam lamps mounted in our big bombers' wings insure safe landings on dark, strange fields. This is just one kind of hundreds of G-E fluorescent and incandescent lamps designed and developed to withstand the shocks of battle.



A new tool for American industry in wartime production, the million-volt industrial Xray that looks through steel and detects flaws, is a product of peacetime G-E research in electronics.



Most of the ships in the U.S.'s new two-ocean Navy and Merchant Marine are propelled by turbines. These super-efficient machines, built to G-E designs, are blood brothers to the big machines that supply your electric power.



Electric flying suits, developed from the G-E automatic blanket, help to keep American flyers comfortable and efficient on high-altitude bombing missions.

French Fleet Of 46 Warships To Join Allies

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 17.—Forty-two French warships in addition to the four that steamed across the Atlantic last week will soon be fighting on the side of the United Nations, Vice Admiral Raymond Fenard, chief of the French naval mission to the United States, said today.

The cruisers Gloire and Georges Leygues already are in action against the Axis, Fenard said in an interview aboard the cruiser Montcalm, which is at the Philadelphia Navy Yard for refitting after its trip from Dakar as an escort of the battleship Richelieu.

Fenard, who greeted Admiral Royal V. Ingersoll, commander in chief of the United States Atlantic Fleet, on the Montcalm today, said two more battleships, six cruisers, an aircraft carrier, seven destroyers, 14 submarines and 10 auxiliary craft would join the United Nations armada "soon, but I don't know when."

Three of the submarines, he added, escaped the scuttling at Toulon, and they and the other ships at Dakar, Alexandria and Casablanca are "in good condition." The heavy destroyers Fantasque and Terrible, part of the Richelieu's escort, are at Boston for refitting, he said.

The stocky, bronzed admiral skirted questions on "politics," asserting that "all the men and officers of the French fleet want to do is fight the Germans alongside the United States and her Allies."

"For more than two years," he said, mild blue eyes hardening, "we have been out of the fight against Germany. This is the opportunity we have been longing for. We want to be friends with the Americans and British forever—to fight beside you and win."

A detail of blue-jacketed French marines, red stripes on their sleeves and red "powder puffs" in the center of their caps, stood stiff at attention when Admiral Fenard, smiling broadly, came aboard the Montcalm. A drum and bugle corps greeted him with ruffle and flourishes, repeating the ceremony when Admiral Ingersoll boarded the cruiser.

Bolles Relieved As Defense Aide

to release Bolles from his district duties.

Maj. Leonce Raoul LeGendre, former assistant to Bolles, will succeed today as executive coordinator. LeGendre will retain an office in the Toner School Building, 2324 F Street Northwest, Bolles' headquarters for the past 18 months. Most of the personnel that once swarmed the old schoolhouse is in the process of moving to the District Building, leaving LeGendre with a staff of but five stenographers and clerks.

Bolles was first assigned to the District by the War Department on September 5, 1941. Three days later he was appointed by the Commissioners as executive officer in the office of the coordinator taking over the responsibility of building up a defense organization from Whitehurst, who was later to reassume these duties. Whitehurst at that time was executive of the old District Defense Council.

Operating at first from a single office, then from a small suite in the District Building, Bolles spent his first three months of duty trying to overcome public apathy and build up a protective service according to frequently changing specifications of the national OCD.

After Pearl Harbor, public spirit ran so high that Bolles soon took over the unused Toner School building to house his rapidly growing and functioning organization. Throughout the following year he acted both in his designated position (which was supposed only to help the work of coordinating the defense activities of Washington and the suburbs included in the metropolitan area), and in the unofficial position of director of District defense, to which nobody else had been named.

Court Reverses Conviction Of 3 Alleged Communists

Oklahoma City, Feb. 17 (AP).—The Criminal Court of Appeals reversed convictions of three defendants in Oklahoma's 1940 communism trials that attracted national attention.

The decision wiped out sentences of 10 years in the penitentiary and $5000 fines assessed against the trio on charges that they were guilty of criminal syndicalism by belonging to the Communist Party.

The defendants were Allan Shaw, who was Oklahoma City secretary of the party; Mrs. Ina Wood, wife of Robert Wood who was State secretary of the party, and Eli Jaffee, a young party worker lately in newspaper work in New York.

Woods' conviction and similar sentence also is before the Appellate Court for review.

The main opinion of 37 pages written by Presiding Judge Dick Jones found no competent evidence to show the party sought change by force and violence, and no proof that the defendants of the party advocate principles stated in a vast number of books admitted in the trial. It also cited failure of the court to give the jury certain instructions.

Nevertheless, it pointed out, if the defendants believe in such doctrines, they should realize that the juries who "unanimously and speedily gave them the maximum sentence under the law were speaking the sentiments of this community in general and that the public is practically unanimous against such doctrines and will not condone such advocations."

The four, with a number of others, were arrested after a raid on a Communist book store August 17, 1940.

Jones said in the opinion:

"If this court were to sustain the conviction it could only be because there is a popular demand for it and this in effect would mean a substitution of mob rule for that of courts of law.

"No person more bitterly condemns those who would overthrow our Government or seek to sabotage our war effort than members of this court.

"Only a short year ago a young lad of the author's family was killed in the crash of his basic training plane.

"Many times the thought has occurred that some saboteur may have tampered with his machine, causing it to flounder in midair and crash.

"But even with this confessed bitterness toward those who are not 100 per cent behind this country as it is now established and functioning, the author is convinced that under our Constitution and the established law of the land as reflected by the decisions quoted, this conviction must be reversed. . . ."

Japs Force New Landing On China Coast

Chungking, Feb. 17.—The Japanese have landed forces in Kwangchowwan, French-leased territory on China's far southern coast, the Chinese high command announced tonight, indicating the invaders plan extensive operations in Kwangtung province.

Heavy fighting was reported in the interior of that province, where the Japanese already hold Canton and adjacent sections, and also in the Yangtze valley and eastern China, where the enemy has large forces.

The landing at Kwangchowwan, the Chinese said, followed unsuccessful attempts Monday to put troops ashore at two points on the Liuchow Peninsula, just south of Kwangchowwan. Chinese troops repelled these attempts but early this morning the enemy's main force landed on Tunghai Island in Kwangchowwan Harbor, French territory.

Kwangchowwan, an area of 325 square miles, has been administered by the French Indo-China government, which has been under Japanese domination for two years, but hitherto the Japanese have not bothered the leased territory, 250 miles southwest of Hongkong.

West and north of Canton, the communique said, heavy fighting was in progress in the areas of Samshwi and Shaping. The Chinese recaptured the latter town two days ago, but the Japanese brought up reinforcements and struck back.

Japanese forces were credited with gains against stiff Chinese resistance in northern Hunan and central Hupeh.

Northern Kiangsu, the eastern province containing Shanghai, also was a battleground, with the Chinese inflicting severe casualties against a Japanese expedition attempting to clear out the area.

Old Registration Cards Needed To Get New Tags

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday warned motorists to return their 1942 registration cards with their new tag application blanks if they wish to avoid delay in securing their new "tabs."

More than 20 per cent of the car owners who thus far have returned their applications, he said, have failed to enclose the cards. No new tags will be issued, he declared, until the old registration cards are presented.

Amended traffic regulations, said Van Duzer, permit the operation of a vehicle during the month of March without a registration card. The "kick back" of registration cards is essential, he declared, because present tags are to be used with the new metal tab added.

Missimo

In our midst today is one of the most distinguished women of this generation, Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of China's Generalissimo. She is not an official personage. She did not even come on an official mission, having sought medical treatment for a hurt back, which the New York medicos, it is to be hoped, have cured. But the ceremonies which will be held in the Capital to honor China's first lady testify to her status among the leaders of the United Nations. Congress will doubtless look upon "Missimo," as she is known throughout China, as one of the voices of Free China. There is no role which could get more acclaim from our legislators, as was demonstrated during the President's last address to Congress, when the mention of China aroused particular enthusiasm. In American eyes Free China has become a great power with a title to determine the next world polity gained from its outstanding services in the extinction of world tyranny.

Women acquire greatness either as individuals or as helpmeets, seldom as both. Mrs. Chiang is great as a woman of state and as a wife, and it is difficult to say where the one stops and other begins. Sometimes the job she has done as the spouse of the "Gissimo" is obscured in the comment on her own abilities. It is, however, her chief title to fame. In Chiang Kai-shek she met her destiny as well as China's, and the two immediately became a formidable team. It is no depreciation of the Chinese leader to say that she rounded him out to take his place as a world no less than as a Chinese statesman. No woman can be said to have dedicated herself to her man with the devotion of Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek. She put ceaselessly at his service the education of a cosmopolitan, the sagacity of a member of the famous Soong family, and the fruit of her own natural gifts.

With this dowry the Generalissimo has grown in wisdom and influence. His experience with the world has been limited to Japan. On his marriage he knew neither the West nor any of its languages; neither Westerners nor their civilization. Mrs. Chiang became his personal foreign minister, teaching him the Western ideas which she had imbibed at Wellesley College, acting as his interpreter in his Western contacts. But that was the most obvious of her contributions to her husband. In the best womanly as well as advisory sense she was his guide, counselor and friend in all affairs of state. At the same time she took off his shoulders some of the responsibilities which he had to bear as the regenerator of his country. The measure of her statesmanship in this respect was her recognition of the importance of aviation. For a time she superintended China's air arm. So she grew with her husband, giving and receiving strength, and there could be no higher tribute to any woman.

In another respect Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek is unique. She combines feminine charm and understanding with the vitality and directness which are supposed to be masculine traits. All the Soong sisters, in fact, are renowned for their good looks. There are three of them, though each has her own individual style. The eldest is Mrs. Sun Yat-sen, widow of the Father of the Chinese Republic, whose face has a spiritual quality which, coupled with her gentleness, is enchanting. Mrs. Chiang's beauty is as salient as her quick and alert mind. The youngest is Mrs. H. H. Kung, who is perhaps the most Chinese in her appearance as in her mental process. But, of them all, Mrs. Chiang knows the trade of being a queen, and she will be welcomed today in her own and her husband's behalf as well as China's.

Supply Lines

The point has often been made, and it is worth bearing in mind in connection with current developments in Tunisia, that our troops in North Africa are at the end of a far-flung supply line. Gen. von Arnim's forces in the Bizerte-Tunis area, on the other hand, are only a short distance removed from their principal supply base in Sicily. What is not so often realized is that, despite this real and important advantage, the Germans, too, have their supply difficulties. This was brought out in the press conference held by Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham at Allied headquarters in North Africa the other day.

The commander in chief of the North African-Mediterranean naval forces pointed out that the actual losses in shipping sent under convoy from Britain and America to North Africa have been slight—less than 2 per cent of the total. On the other hand, a very successful war of attrition has been waged by the Allied fleet against Axis shipping on the Sicily-Tunisia route. At the very least, Admiral Cunningham estimates, one out of every three Axis ships bound for Bizerte and Tunis never got there. So while supplies and reinforcements continue to reach Arnim and Rommel, a considerable percentage of the consignments has been sent to the bottom. This percentage is likely to grow as Allied naval power in the Mediterranean grows.

Thus, despite the seizure of 100 French merchantmen by the Nazis at the time the unoccupied portion of France was occupied, the enemy is already "feeling a shortage." And the greater that shortage becomes, the more certain it will be that the tide in Tunisia will begin to turn in our favor.

Food For Europe

As the certainty of victory in the European theater of war grows evident, the more apparent it becomes that victory will mean not the end but only the beginning of our difficulties in that unhappy continent. Foremost among these difficulties will be the necessity of feeding and otherwise rehabilitating the survivors of the territories despoiled by the German occupation. Increasing pressure upon the Allied authorities is bound to arise to permit passage of food and other relief materials into the most seriously stricken areas. Some pressure will come, of course, from humanitarian groups here in America, but the main demand that military rescue be accompanied by material rescue will come from the refugee governments.

This situation will afford a political problem of the first magnitude. As long as they had any hope of victory, the Nazis were forced to assume a certain responsibility for distribution of food in the occupied countries. Only thus could they hope to keep the industries in those countries working in the interest of their war program. This necessity was apparently not anticipated by the Nazis, unprepared as they were for a prolonged war. Thus the lack of preparation and organization in the matter of food distribution has placed the severest strain on the European transportation system. It was mainly out of fear of relieving this strain that the British declined to remove the blockade restrictions to permit supplies to enter continental Europe.

In some instances, however, the British have modified their blockade policy. Late in 1941, for example, food and clothing for French children were sent to occupied France. In the same winter groups of Belgian children were sent to Switzerland for care and feeding, and the Swiss were permitted to make certain imports in compensation. Swedish ships are now permitted to carry Canadian wheat to starving Greece. These and other exceptions, however, were so arranged as to afford little or no relaxation of the strain on the German economy.

But, as Germany prepares to go on the defensive, Goering's threat to let the whole of Europe starve assumes a greater and greater significance. The problem is complicated by the question whether, as the Allies prepare for the invasion, any shipping can be spared for any but strictly military purposes. There is also the likelihood that by the time of invasion, the whole intra-European system of transport will have been pretty thoroughly wrecked. Finally, there is the fact that none of the United Nations has now any large reserves of the foods most urgently needed in Europe.

Here, then, is the situation. It will call for a nice balancing of political necessities and humanitarian considerations against military necessities. A premature or ill-considered relief program might run the double risk of giving the now desperate Nazis a longer lease of economic life, or, by favoring one country above another, provoke the most dangerous political repercussions. A comprehensive program that is too long delayed, on the other hand, might make pacification difficult, if not impossible. We can only rely upon our war administrators to handle this problem with statesmanship.

Mr. Brown's Job

It is comforting to have Price Administrator Prentiss Brown's assurance that there will be no appeasement on price controls in his administration. Perhaps the pressure groups who began to camp on Mr. Brown's doorstep when he seemed to herald leniency as opposed to Henderson toughness will take warning and act as if the country were fighting for its life. Firmness might well be extended to simplification of procedure. Judging from the complaints in the trade papers, this is just the opposite of the characteristic of OPA material. An example is order No. 153, having to do with women's and children's outer apparel. This was issued, clarified, amended, revised, and finally scrapped by order No. 287, which is likewise going through the same process.

Mr. Brown might be well advised to hang up Webster's definition of "simple" in the lawyer's rooms. This is "not complex or complicated, without embellishment, plain, unadorned." To be sure, the business of price control is complex. But some of the orders emanating from OPA seem to be destined to catch people rather than to educate them. Perfection of legal craftsmanship is less important than an attempt to secure understanding and acceptance. In other words, let OPA provide a yardstick instead of leaving business to use a tape measure.

Perhaps simplification could be further aided by clarifying policy. Now is the best time to determine a basic policy on the job to be done, how to do it, who is to do what. In this connection pricing and rationing are both one and the same problem, and both should be handled by Mr. Brown. Canada administers both under its Wartime Prices and Trade Board, and the evidence from Ottawa is that the administration is smooth. Confusion of function at the top has a habit of working all the way down the line to chaos in administration, as the country has reason to know from the history of rationing so far.

Bureau-Crazy

The excesses of bureaucracy are becoming so pronounced that the people—even at the risk of being "pettifoggers"—are looking more and more to Congress to give them relief. The latest example is the proxy rules promulgated by the SEC. As if disturbed by the fact that the SEC seemed to have settled into a back seat for at least the duration, that body last August proposed to revise the rules governing the relations between American corporations and their stockholders. Of course, the ostensible object was to protect the stockholders and to assure perfect democratization of the American corporation.

But, so far as we had heard, there had been no agitation from the stockholder for SEC intervention. At least when Mr. Milton V. Freeman, a member of the SEC legal staff, was questioned on the point, he admitted that the SEC had received only 25 complaints. This from America's army of stockholders! But bureaucracies have a habit of knowing much better than the people themselves what is good for them, and the SEC acted on such an assumption. It first tried to create a hullabaloo, in the form of a demagogic statement by Chairman Ganson S. Purcell, that "the proxy device has been sadly prostituted" and that "we see more and more today instances of management feathering its nest at the expense of its stockholders, as well as that of the Government." Then the rules came out of the SEC, but the authority for them was immediately challenged in a bill submitted to Congress, which, however, died when the Seventy-seventh Congress adjourned.

Now new rules have been put out which are in part even more objectionable than their predecessors. In them the SEC provides that no matter what kind of crackpot proposal is made by a stockholder, that proposal must be summarized by the management and circulated to the stockholders along with the remainder of the proxy material. The waste of paper is a minor objection to this regulation. So is the drain on the time of industrial managements which are now immersed in warmaking. What makes this particular rule noxious is the fact that under it a management will be compelled to circulate to all stockholders matters which may simply be vicious or libelous.

A sampling of the proposals which any big corporation gets in its mail shows that by no means all the ideas coming from the country's 10 million stockholders are significant or even material. They may simply be scurrilous. Yet under these proxy rules the management would have to circulate them. In so doing, incidentally, it would help to frustrate one of the primary purposes of the Securities Exchange Act, namely, the prohibition of the dissemination of misleading or untrue statements to security holders. For the persons making statements under the auspices of the corporation itself would not be subject to penalties under the act.

There are many other details which the new rules call upon the corporation to circulate with their proxy solicitations. They may have only a collateral connection with the running of the corporation. They put a responsibility upon the directorate not contemplated in the original act. The result will be to add considerably to the harassment of managements and the labors of company staffs, both of which are not only working at high speed on war assignments but are also handicapped by depleted office personnel.

But the main objection to the commission's latest essay into regulation is that the new rules constitute a strained construction of the proxy powers given to the SEC. The commission is attempting to extend its jurisdiction not only over the solicitation of proxies but over "any request to revoke a proxy or not to execute a proxy" by defining these transactions as being the "solicitation of a proxy." It is also attempting to assert jurisdiction over the solicitation of proxies other than in interstate commerce or by use of the mails. If for no other reason, Congress should take note of this latest instance of "government by decree."

The ribbed and spinal
Anatomy of what
Is . . . and is not.

Bombs Over Denmark

By Joachim Joesten

WHEN low-sweeping British Mosquito bombers on January 27 executed a daring afternoon attack on Copenhagen, it was reported to be the first raid on the Danish capital. But that information was not correct. Copenhagen has been bombed by the R. A. F. several times before, the last time on May 2, 1942, when British planes blasted the city for 45 minutes. The latest raid was something special though: it was the first daylight attack on Copenhagen.

In the meantime, a number of interesting details have been received here, from both Danish and Swedish sources, regarding not only the effects of this particular raid, but the bombing of Danish territory in general.

It appears that the first reports which declared the primary target of the last raid, the Burmeister & Wain Shipyards, to have been "practically wiped out," overshot the mark. Burmeister & Wain is the largest shipbuilding firm in Scandinavia, with plants, shipyards and subsidiary factories spread all over the southern section of Copenhagen. Its facilities could hardly have been wiped out in an attack of this size, in which, according to the air raid defense chief of the city, only 32.3 tons of bombs were dropped.

Devastating Raid

The raid, nevertheless, was devastating enough. Burmeister & Wain's main shipyard on Refshale Island was badly hit. The Diesel engine plant a—large, glass-roofed building that faces Christiansborg Castle across the canal—also suffered considerable damage; a nearby sugar refinery was totally destroyed. Damage of a yet undetermined nature also was inflicted on the Knippels Drawbridge, a famous Copenhagen landmark. There were only a few fatalities, but some 9000 people had to be evacuated because of a time-bomb that fell into the crowded industrial quarter around Islands Brygge.

Perhaps the most curious fact about the attack was that the B. B. C., a few days before the raid, had warned the population in a Danish-language broadcast that Burmeister & Wain would be bombed, with the result that many people had evacuated the danger area in good time. It is even reported that the Danish underground had expressly invited the R. A. F. to come and get the Burmeister & Wain plants, since they were being operated for German account, and that many people thought the attack was being unduly delayed. In any event, all reports agree that the population, when the raiders at last arrived, openly expressed their gratification.

Danish eyewitnesses of the raid have expressed their amazement at the weak defense put up by the Germans. Only a few fighter planes rose to challenge the Mosquitoes and antiaircraft fire was weak and ineffective. An unanswered question asked by many is whether the Germans were really unprepared, despite the warning given beforehand, or they simply did not have the means to defend the occupied city.

Other Danish towns have taken far more severe punishment than the capital. Among the most bombed places are Aalborg and Aarhus on Jutland, which are both ringed with German airbases. According to Danish official sources some 10,000 bombs have been dropped since the Nazi occupation on 500 to 600 places in Denmark. Admitted casualties to date are 39 killed and 68 badly injured. The material damage is estimated at three million dollars. Some or all of these figures may, of course, have been doctored under Nazi influence.)

Routes Cross Denmark

Bombings of Danish territory, however, are far less frequent than "transit raids." Many of the R. A. F.'s skyways to Germany lead across Denmark. This explains the relatively high number of crashes and distress landings on Danish soil. There are many British airmen's graves, especially in Jutland. According to the Copenhagen Nationaltidende of January 17, 48 R. A. F. men lie buried in the cemetery of Aabenraa in North-Schleswig alone. Their graves are always covered with fresh flowers.

The Swedish daily "Socialdemokraten" of last November 11 reported that the Danish authorities, whose duty it is to pick up crashed British fliers, always keep their prisoners as long as possible before turning them over to the Germans. Whenever it is rumored that the police have "guests from England," a crowd gathers outside the police station, cheering the fliers as they come out.

On one occasion, the paper relates, two captured R. A. F. men caused a hilarious sensation when it was found that they were wearing tuxedos underneath their flying dress. They had been snatched away from a dinner and were hoping to get back to finish it, but ran out of gas on the way home.

In another instance, a downed Briton parachuted late one night into the domain of a wealthy landowner. Discovered, he was taken to the lord of the manor, who treated his guest with the utmost courtesy, but finally informed him that to his greatest regret he would have to turn him over to the authorities. "Oh, yes, of course," replied the Englishman, who was dog-tired and slightly wounded, "but I would rather not be awakened before 10 o'clock". His request was promptly granted by the accommodating Danish police.

Fall Of Kharkov

By Barnet Nover

Germany's Most Serious Defeat

IN HIS SPEECH of October 1 Adolf Hitler, now rapidly becoming the forgotten man of the Third Reich, went to great lengths to boast of the tremendous gains made by the Wehrmacht in Russia last summer.

"All that we took in the past months, merely in terms of space," he said, "is unique in the history of the world."

Now all, or practically all, of the territory overrun by the German army between June and October of last year, and such major strong points as Velikie Luki, Schluesselberg, Kursk and Kharkov, which were captured by the Nazis in 1941, are back in Russian hands. No wonder that one German military spokesman is quoted as saying: "We have suffered a defeat unprecedented in this war."

That is the literal truth.

FOUR AND A HALF months ago, when Hitler made his speech, the German hope of victory was already beginning to recede into the distance, which is, no doubt, why so much of what the Fuehrer had to tell the German people was couched in defensive terms. Yet outwardly, at least, the situation facing the Reich was not at all bad.

At that time a powerful force, the German Sixth Army, was battering away at Stalingrad, whose fall Hitler took for granted. Other German armies had overrun the Kuban and were within a short distance of Grozny. And in Egypt Marshal Rommel's Afrika-Korps was within 60 miles of the Nile Delta.

SINCE THEN, both in Africa and in Russia, the tables have been turned on the Nazis.

In Africa, the once vast Axis holdings have shrunk to a narrow foothold in the eastern half of Tunisia.

It is true that in recent skirmishes in the Faid sector and at Gafsa, the Germans have had the upper hand. German propaganda will no doubt make the most of such victories; above all they will be used to strengthen the German people's confidence in their military machine.

But the results of the fighting in Tunisia thus far have done nothing to alter the belief that the Axis is and has no alternative other than to remain on the defensive in that sector. The fight in Tunisia is, for Germany and Italy, a holding action designed to postpone an Allied invasion of Europe.

IT IS NOT in Africa but on the Eastern Front that the war is being decided. And there the war is going catastrophically against the Germans.

It was bad enough for the Wehrmacht to have failed at Stalingrad, a failure that meant the loss of an entire army—the German Sixth. But disaster was piled on disaster for the Third Reich when, following the debacle at Stalingrad, Kursk, Rostov and Kharkov were lost. For the effect of these losses is likely to be to push the German lines in the south back to the Dnieper. Yet so rapid has the Red army's westward advance been that it is doubtful whether the German army is prepared to make a stand even on the Dnieper.

THE TERRITORY lost by the Germans and regained by the Russians during the past three months happens to be of tremendous importance. But the fact that the Northern Caucasus, the Kuban, the Don Valley and the Valley of the Donets have now again changed hands does not begin to tell the whole story of the Russian triumph and the German disaster.

In the course of withdrawing from the region conquered last summer, the German army had to leave vast stores behind and also lost an untold number that were killed or taken prisoner by the Red army. Coming at a time when the Nazis find themselves scraping the very bottom of the manpower barrel, and when their production is far behind their needs, these losses are irreplaceable. And there are also the psychological consequences of the German debacle to take into account.

THE GERMAN people are now under notice that they can lose the war, indeed, that they are losing it. But a nation which failed to thrive on a diet of victories is hardly likely to prosper on a diet of disaster.

This does not mean that the German people will revolt against Nazi rule. They can no more do that than the Italian people are in a position to revolt against Mussolini.

Germany, too, is an occupied country. But what we are likely to see take place in the Reich is a shift in the balance of power, with the army taking over the complete direction of civil as well as military affairs and Hitler shelved or even thrown to the wolves. For this is the last chance the army has to save itself.

Defeat in the war this time would mean the end of a class which kept its power and its prerogatives unimpaired from the days of Frederick the Great to those of the Nazis. Hitler was the German army's most zealous patron, its greatest benefactor. This does not mean that the generals will not sacrifice him if it would save them. But so far as the outside world is concerned the change from Nazi rule to army rule in the Reich would be a change from Tweedledee to Tweedledum. The destruction of Hitlerism would be of no avail if, in bringing it about, the Allies did not also destroy the spirit of militarism in the Reich. Both must be destroyed beyond possibility of renewal.

Ohio River Floods

Since the disastrous Ohio flood of 1937 I have carried on extensive correspondence with the Flood Control Committee, the War Department and numerous Congressmen and Senators regarding a plan to prevent all future floods in the Ohio Valley.

As the flood records show, there was a major flood in the Ohio Valley in 1917, '27 and '37 and it is only good sound sense to assume the next major flood will be in 1947.

I was raised on a farm in Illinois and every farmer who had a creek flowing through his farm knew that he would have a bad flood every six years and my father always prepared for an extra two weeks work to clean up after such flood. These floods could be foretold to a year when they would come.

My statements following are based on the congressional reports of the Seventy-seventh Congress.

"It would be rash to say the plans as now approved or even as they may be modified in the future are a complete and final answer to the flood problem in the Ohio Valley."

Page 355: "The Ohio does more damage in the Mississippi Valley than the Missouri, Mississippi, Arkansas, Red and White Rivers combined."

The levees along the Ohio will long stand as monuments to the War Department's shame and incompetency.

At Cincinnati the 1917 flood was 8 feet above any previous flood and it is only fair to assume an additional 9 feet will be added to that record in 1947. If such is the case the Ohio Valley will be the scene of the most disastrous floods the world has ever known.

Coffee And Rye

While browsing through some old newspapers at the Library of Congress yesterday afternoon I ran across the following news item which is pertinent to our time.

"The following recipe for war coffee is given for those who have drunk it during wartimes before. Sound, plump rye, perfectly cleansed, scalded, partially dried, toasted slowly (not burned) and to 4 tablespoonfuls of the toasted rye one tablespoonful of toasted coffee was added. It is cheap, palatable, and wholesome—acceptable to patriots if not to epicures.—Alexandria Gazette, May 11, 1861."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Spirit At Guadalcanal

White crosses in the blazing sun
Are scattered through the jungle hell;
They mark the graves of lads, each one,
Who played the game — and played it well!

Those markers stiff against the sky
Shall through receding years proclaim
How well they all obeyed the cry
"Get in there, kid, and win this game!"

No home-grounds were they playing there—
This was a new one to 'em all;
But they could hear the call so clear—
"We gotta take this one! Play ball!"

No Sunday exhibition gay—
No romp when everything was jake—
This was the tough one far away—
The "croocial one we gotta take!"

No well-kept grounds all cut to form—
No gala one back where you live;
The hard one played out through a storm
When everything you've got you give!

No set-up near the cheering stands—
No bands, no laughter and no drums;
Yet from afar the old command:
"Stay in there, kid, and get them bums!"

No minor league one in July—
This took that "extra special clout,"
True always to the home-town cry
"Keep swinging, kid, and run it out!"

This was "the one we had to get"—
But one that knew no bleachers' roar;
Yet each man this old challenge met—
"Give all ya have! We gotta score!

These kids had learned to play the game
Back home on countless, sunny fields
And in the war they knew the same
Grand fighting heart that never yields.

The old sandlots from coast to coast
Had given them the stuff it takes;
They got "it" where it's given most—
Where no one "heils!" and no one quakes.

No jungle had these youngsters seen
They symbolized the little town
But they knew one tradition keen—
Come through, kids, when them chips is down!"

Personally we don't read the social colmuns, but the wife does, and she picked up an unusual item there the other day. It seems some girl married a civilian.

So this my loving message, pet:
You really ain't seen nuthin' yet!

Tokyo, announcing that the Japs have left Guadalcanal says they accomplished their mission. The mission must have been to stay up on top of a balancing-pole even after the juggler disappeared.

Vanishing Americanisms

"Are these shoes worth resoling?"

"Do you still think this pair worth saving?"

Elmer Twitchell, who takes everything very seriously, has told the OPA that he only has one pair o' shoes and would like to know if it is okay for him to carry one spare.

Clare Luce's Maiden Speech

Mrs. Luce should go back to writing plays. She is not dealing with fantasy now. She is dealing with reality. However clever her speech was, the fact stands out that her speech would tend to divide us among ourselves and from our allies, and that is definitely not what we need at this time.

Washington, Feb. 13.

This is merely a new species of isolationism. She recognizes the paramount importance of the airplane, so she would prepare now to dominate the skies. She would grant freedom of the seas, which is one of our war aims, but she would deny freedom of the airways to anybody but America because the seas are now subordinate to modern aircraft. Thus Mrs. Luce is fighting to return the cruteches to a cripple; but when she wins, she wants to put hobbles on his feet.

G. E. JOWERS.
Williamsport, Pa., Feb. 12.

I understand that Mrs. Luce, somewhat miffed at the lukewarm press notices she has heretofore achieved in Variety, has transferred, for the next two years at least, her activities to the National Theater stage.

The opening performance of her latest magnum opus, "Globaloney" was, in my opinion, a distinct flop. It seems that the audience, subjected to a phenomenal advance publicity build-up (thanks to the fact that a relative of hers by marriage happens to be connected with several magazines), felt distinctly let down. Mrs. Luce's acting was amateurish, her timing was poor, and the entire performance smelled from ham. The only saving feature was that the star was handsomely gowned. ISIDOR SHAFFER.
Flushing, N. Y., Feb. 13.

Mrs. Luce's plan is foolish as it would completely stop all international air travel. If we forbid the use of the air above our land to airplanes from all other nations, it is natural to expect that they will do the same to our planes.

Mrs. Luce also attacked the Vice President's plan for us to help raise the standard of living of other countries so that, as he phrased it, people throughout the world could afford a quart of milk a day. Her attack merely betrays her ignorance of economics. For if we participate in international action to raise the standard of living in other lands, their people will be better able to buy our goods and their buying power will increase our prosperity as well.

ALFRED BAKER LEWIS.
New York, N. Y., Feb. 13.

I heard a good comment this morning on Mrs. Clare Luce's speech in Congress. When my boss, a Government official, came into the office someone asked him what he thought about her statement about "globaloney."

He said that if she had shown any comprehension of her subject matter he might have called her argument one of "Claravoidance," but he was forced to the conclusion that it was just "Lucidiocy."

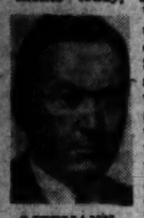
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Globaloney

FROM WHAT is being said it would seem that we cannot work out specific international settlements today, as Mr. Sumner Welles is urging us to do, because on the one hand Stalin has not said publicly what he thinks and because on the other hand we do not know what Congress and the American people will think when they are asked to ratify. We have no choice, says Mrs. Luce, but to indulge in monumental generalities.



LIPPMANN

But is that really so? Is it really true that we have to be like Gaston and Alphonse in the old comic strip who never could walk through the door because they would say to each other "After you, my dear Alphonse . . . After you, my dear Gaston." I do not think so. I believe it can be demonstrated that if we begin at the beginning and take a clear view of the vital interests of the United States, we can form specific policies which make sense.

I DO NOT say they will establish at once the Four Freedoms throughout the world. But they can maintain them in a very large part of the world. I do not say that they will put the Atlantic Charter immediately and universally into effect. But they can make a good start towards testing out those principles in practice.

Nor do I say that they will guarantee everlasting peace. But if we can prevent another great war for say 60 years, long enough to raise a generation of men and women who never had to go through the agony of total war and do not bear the scars of remembrance, we shall have done our part. We shall be able to say to those who come after us that the task of using that much peace and improving it and maintaining it is their business and not ours.

SO LET US begin with our own vital American interests and see where in fact they lead us. How shall we state them? I think we can say that in the Pacific from Alaska to the Philippines and in the Atlantic from Greenland to Patagonia, the danger of conquest, invasion, and of interference by foreign powers in domestic affairs must be reduced to an absolute minimum. This is, I think, what we mean by our vital interest in American security

We also have a vital interest, though it is secondary to security in promoting peaceable and profitable commercial intercourse not only within the region of American security but with the great continents beyond. For in Europe, Asia and Africa there live nearly 90 per cent of the human race. This is, I think, what we mean by our vital interest in economic opportunity.

LET US consider American security. It is not strategically feasible to protect the great area by standing guard everywhere at once—in Greenland, Alaska, the Philippines, Brazil—and waiting to let our potential enemies decide when and where they will strike. Four times in our history non-American powers have demonstrated how unsound is such a defensive strategy.

In 1812 Britain landed an army in Maryland and actually occupied Washington. In 1860 the France of Napoleon 3d landed an army in Mexico, conquered it, and crowned an emperor in Mexico City. In 1898, Spain, a feeble naval power, sent a fleet across the Atlantic. The fleet coaled at Martinique, and entered a Cuban harbor without our being able to intercept it. Moreover, it did this with our own Navy divided, part of it being at Hampton Roads trying to defend the Atlantic Coast and the other part being off Puerto Rico. If the Spanish fleet had been a little stronger and a little better commanded, we might have lost the naval war because half of our fleet might have been caught by the wheels Spanish fleet. Finally in 1941, again standing on the defensive and waiting to let the enemy strike first, we were very nearly ruined at Hawaii and we were unable to defend Wake, Guam, and the Philippines.

SURELY this is proof beyond the shadow of a doubt that we cannot achieve security by passive defense. It follows, does it not, that our true security depends upon our relations with the nations across the oceans on the opposite shores from which the attack would come. Those of them who are our strong and dependable friends relieve us of the need to be on guard against attack by them. Those who are not dependable, or not strong, or are hostile present the vital problems of American security.

There are five great powers across the oceans. They are Russia, Japan, and China across the Pacific. They are Britain and France across the Atlantic. Germany has twice in our time been an American problem. In 1917 Germany was a problem because if she had defeated Britain, France and Russia, we should have had as our nearest neighbor across the Atlantic a nation seeking to expand by conquest instead of two nations who could be counted on absolutely not to challenge us in the Western Hemisphere. In 1940 Germany was again a problem because she had actually reached the Atlantic by conquering France, and was also in alliance with Japan.

WITH THE DEFEAT and disarmament of Germany, our task for the next two generations is to see that the Atlantic remains secure because Britain and France are strong and friendly. With the defeat and disarmament of Japan, our task in the Pacific is to see that with Russia our nearest neighbor across the Pacific we have a friendly relation based on common interest, and that our other neighbor, China, is strong enough to be united, united enough to be strong, and friendly enough with Russia and with us and with Britain, to tempt no one to break the peace of Asia.

The four great nations who are our transoceanic neighbors, —with whom we have to have friendly relations to be secure,— are as a matter of fact all the great powers of the United Nations.

THUS AMERICAN security and collective security are two sides of the same shield. Our direct national interest in its most elemental strategic terms, and the international organization for peace are one and the same fundamental thing. If we really make the specific military arrangements which will give us the bases, the outposts, the armaments, and the necessary allies to see to it that the Philippines will not again be conquered, or Hawaii attacked, or South America threatened, we shall in fact be making the specific military arrangements which we have to make to translate the monumental generalities about peace into effective action.

IN THIS FIELD there is no fundamental conflict between idealism and realism, between our national interest and our global responsibility. If you think out the problems of security, whether you start from the ideal of collective security or from the real needs of the American Navy, Army, and Airforce to defend what the Nation expects them to defend, you will come out in the same place.

For enlightened self-interest and an enlightened sense of responsibility are, when you reduce them to Mr. Welles' practical and specific arrangements, indistinguishable. They are in conflict only when national self-interest or global responsibility are not fully enlightened on the practical measures necessary to make them work. Thus when global responsibility is unenlightened it is globaloney and when national self-interest is not enlightened it is baloney.

Marines Told How

Jap's Tricks Exposed

(The following story was written by Sergt. Samuel Shaffer, Washington, D. C., Marine Corps combat correspondent.)

A South Pacific base (delayed)—"Sweat now will save blood later."

Under this injunction from their commanding officer, the marines in this area are toughening their muscles for jungle warfare and sharpening their wits for maximum combat efficiency. Physical conditioning and night operations are emphasized, with 20-mile hikes in the dark to accustom the marines to operations in the gloom the Japs prefer for their offensives and infiltrations. Such hikes are silent, officers give their orders in whispers, smoking is prohibited.

The Jap's bag of tricks in jungle fighting, opened for inspection by the intelligence sections of marine units which engaged the enemy in the Solomons, has been turned inside out, and the marines are more certain than ever that American fighting men can and have outfought their wily Japanese enemies.

Commandments Listed

Among the "don'ts" dinned into the marines by their officers are these commandments:

Don't get chummy with strangers in dark places just because they speak English. Lots of Japs went to American schools. Keep silent if you're uncertain; let your new friend talk himself to death.

Don't run out to pick up leaflets a Jap drops from his plane. The English is terrible and, besides, he's probably coming right back to shoot the place up.

Don't try to start a hock shop in the jungle by picking up Jap watches, fountain pen, flash lights, and other trinkets that may have mines of "booby traps" attached. You don't care what time it is, you're mostly too busy to write, and you're safer in the dark.

Don't walk up whistling when you kill a dozen Japs with that first grenade. Japs like to play dead so they can sock you when your back's turned.

Don't get careless when you're out walking at night. You think it's "Mack" along side you, but it may be Hirohito.

Don't Underestimate Foe

The marines do not underestimate a Jap, nor doubt their ability to match him trick for trick and defeat him. Their attitude is well illustrated by paragraphs from the pamphlet on jungle warfare which is read to very man in training for the South Pacific fighting:

"The Jap jungle soldier has proved himself to be a thoroughly competent and effective enemy. His tactics and deportment are designed for use in that most difficult of terrain, the jungle. He knows the jungle and knows how to use it to the best advantage. He is a ruthless and often fanatic foe. He gives no quarter and expects none. He would rather die than surrender. We must not make the mistake of underestimating him.

"That is fatal but he can be beaten and has been beaten by men determined to win."

Men Wanted

Manpower Major Problem of 1943

High administration officials view manpower as the major production problem of 1943, with manpower crises comparable to earlier crises over materials supply and critical component parts expected in the next few months, it was learned yesterday.

A report submitted to Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt by his bureau of program planning frankly acknowledged that "meeting the manpower requirements for 1943 will be difficult."

"It becames clear," the report stated, "that there will be increasingly severe shortages in critical occupations and in many industrial centers and agricultural communities."

Figures included in the report testify to the extent of McNutt's problem. A total of 6.4 million persons must be added to the labor force during the year to meet the needs of the armed services, war industry and agriculture.

Half of this amount—3.2 million persons—must be supplied by the release of workers now employed in less essential civilian activities—a job that was started, but only started by the recent promulgation of a list of "nondeferable" occupations.

A total of 2.7 million persons must be secured by increasing the labor force—by bringing women who never worked before into industry, by persuading older people who have retired to go back to work, by giving jobs to handicapped people and minority groups which are presently underemployed.

The remaining 500,000 must be picked up by reducing unemployment from its present level of about 1.5 million to one million which is regarded as absolute "bedrock" for unemployment, considering normal transfers of workers from job to job.

One of the main difficulties faced by McNutt is the fact that he cannot pick up these additional workers in the same proportions throughout the country. Shortages are most acute in war plant areas where housing and transportation do not permit the importation of many additional persons.

That means that nonessential industries in these shortage areas must bear the brunt of supplying the 3.2 million workers needed from them, with non-war centers retaining relatively easy labor markets.

Getting workers out of less essential activities confronts the Government with the problem of concentrating industry away from labor shortage areas—a problem that has been scarcely dented.

Joseph L. Weiner, director of Civilian Supply, recently criticized the War Manpower Commission for its failure to develop a program to protect the "minimum essential levels" of civilian industry. WMC officials resented Weiner's attack, it was understood, because of their feeling that the War Production Board which has jurisdiction over Weiner's office, has failed to develop a workable program of concentration of industry which will release manpower from shortage areas.

It is understood that WMC officials have pressed WPB to develop concentration programs for shortage areas.

If the manpower crisis develops as now expected, WPB and WMC will be compelled to work much closer together, handlnig the problem in much the same way that materials flow problems were handled earlier.

The planning report urged the adoption of the following 10-point program to overcome manpower shortages:

1. Use fully all employed workers and eliminate labor hoarding.
2. To anticipate needs for workers and provide for the needs by training programs.
3. To replace with youths, older men, or women, all men 18 through 37 engaged in activities that can be performed by such workers.
4. Eliminate discrimination against Negroes, women and other available workers.
5. Recruit all possible additional workers in shortage areas.
6. Shift production schedules to transfer work out of shortage areas.
7. Curtail nonwar employment to bare minimums in shortage areas.
8. Increase housing and community facilities in shortage areas to provide for migration of additional workers.
9. Mobilize townspeople to provide 3.5 million farm workers in peak seasons, and transfer workers from subsistence to more productive farms.
10. Take measures to reduce migration, channel hiring, and prevent disruption of labor markets by pirating and other practices.

Cargo Risk Rates On Atlantic Cut

New York, Feb. 17 (AP).—Marine insurance underwriters today announced further reductions in cargo war risk insurance rates.

Rates on shipments between east coast South American ports south of Paramaribo and United States Atlantic and Gulf ports were reduced from 12½ to 10 per cent, while shipments between the same ports and Canadian Atlantic ports were reduced from 14 to 12½ per cent, and between United States and Canadian Pacific ports via the Panama Canal rates were reduced rom 12½ to 10 per cent.

Other changes were made in rates between West African ports and the United States and Canada with reductions of 15 to 12½ per cent, as well as South Africa and East Africa south of the Gulf of Aden via the cape, where the rate was reduced from 17½ to 15 per cent.

Power Output Up 15.1%

New York, Feb. 17 (AP).—Electric power production for the week ended February 13 was 3,939,708,000 kilowatt hours, an increase of 15.1 per cent over the 3,421,639,000 of the comparable week last year, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. In the preceding week the sendout was 3,960,242,000 kilowatt hours.

Allied Subs Sink Or Damage 8 Ships

London, Feb. 17 (INS).—Eight more enemy supply ships have been sunk or crippled in recent operations by Allied submarines in the central Mediterranean, the Admiralty announced today. Six were destroyed, a seventh and the eighth was hit by a torpedo and probably sunk, the announcement said.

(The British radio, in a broadcast heard in New York by C. B. S. said that one of the biggest convoys to reach Malta since the start of the island's siege has arrived. Dockyard workers unloaded 2000 tons of stores in six days, the broadcast said.)

Jap-Held Airbase Battered by R. A. F.

New Delhi, Feb. 17 (INS).—British headquarters announced today that the Royal Air Force, flying American-built four-motored Liberator bombers, shattered installations at the Jap-held Magwe airdrome in Burma with 1000-pound bombs last night.

Are Nazis' Hopes Low?

Signs Hint They Are

By Edwin Shanke

Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Feb. 17.—German morale has hit the lowest level of the war, and it is questionable whether Hitler can lift it out of the depths as he has in the past with military victories.

People who have recently been in Germany, the Nazi press and Swedish newspapers confirm this view. Perhaps especially significant are reports of how heavily the terror of bombings is hitting the German people, and how wounded soldiers describe the "hell" on the Eastern Front and express hope they won't have to go back.

At the root of German gloom and depression are the rapidity with which Germany is being brought into the "front lines" through R. A. F. bombings and the hardships of the Nazi conception of total war, the impact of heavy casualties, the drastic stripping of the war-weary Germans of everything but the barest necessities on one hand and the merciless spur to new effort on the other, and shaken confidence in Hitler as a soldier-genius.

Suggestive of 1918

All this is against a backdrop suggestive of 1918. The Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung recently carried the slogan, "Do the opposite from 1918."

Although morale is bad, no crackup should be expected before a decisive military defeat becomes plain to every German. The Nazis have wiped out the oppositional political leadership so effectively that there are no signs of counter-organization.

Heinrich Himmler, Hitler's watchdog, is taking no chances. A press campaign to draw recruits for his private army intended mainly for use during internal crisis has been running for weeks.

How hard the war has struck German homes is openly described by the Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung.

"In the last year the war has heavily burdened not only the warriors at the fronts but also many persons in the homeland," it said "British terror from the air has hit seriously the German cities heavier than heretofore. Gaps in families have opened more and more and many new crosses have been added to those on the battlefields in the east and Africa."

Bombs Daze Civilians

Many Germans evacuated from bombed districts were described as "too shaken' to give a coherent picture of what happens during a heavy raid.

Wounded soldiers spread uneasiness at home by telling, as a typical instance of hardships, of a company twice reinforced with 100 men, yet reduced to 18 men when it left the vicious fighting area.

The soldiers, who heretofore regarded themselves and their leadership as invincible, have watched Hitler dismiss generals who led them to victory after victory. And now with reverses everywhere and a long absence from home, the soldiers are becoming tired and discouraged, and complain of how unlucky they have been in their allies.

Meanwhile war crimes—sabotage, black marketing, blackout thefts and burglaries, and disregard of war regulations—are steadily increasing.

Holland Quits WPB

Small Plants Program Is Assailed

Lou E. Holland made his formal departure as director of the War Production Board's smaller war plants division yesterday with an assertion that the recent change in management of that unit, "is detrimental to the cause of small business and the war effort."

Recently President Roosevelt appointed Col. Robert W. Johnson, an Army ordnance officer, to a vice chairmanship of the WPB and head of its smaller war plants division.

WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson said at that time that he hoped Holland would remain as assistant to Colonel Johnson.

Holland said in his letter of resignation to Nelson that already, after negotiations with the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission, he had arranged for "hundreds of millions of dollars in contracts to many thousands of small concerns heretofore not a part of the war effort." He added:

"In view of the fact that the program is now well under way, I cannot help but feel that the recent action involving the management of the Smaller War Plants Corp. is detrimental to the cause of small business and the war effort."

Nelson promptly accepted Holland's resignation, which reached his desk after Holland had made it public. In a letter, Nelson said he fully appreciated Holland's "sincere efforts," but declared:

"I cannot agree with your inference that this appointment (Johnson's) is detrimental to the cause of small business and the war effort. On the contrary, the sole reason for the organizational change to which you refer was to make our work for and with small business more effective."

Holland is a resident of Kansas City, Mo.

Colonel Johnson promised, at a press conference Tuesday, war contracts to small plants amounting to between 25 and 35 billion dollars.

He said the job would be decentralized with regional and district offices authorized to make loans to small plants of $25,000 without reference to Washington for approval.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

One of the next things to be rationed in Washington is basketball, and it's due to the customers' run-away appetites for more of the kind of basketball that is being played here by a team of hot-stuff colored professionals, the Lichtman Bears.

POVICH

They're undefeated for two seasons and their 34-game winning streak has built up such a following of fans that ticket-scalping business is flourishing in the vicinity of Turner's Arena where the Bears hold forth each Sunday. A thousand fans were turned away last week after the place's 1,500 capacity had been reached. A 75-cent ticket in hands of scalpers was retailing outside the arena for as much as five bucks and getting a quick sale.

And so the Bears are going to put their public on double ration. In the future, they're booking the same team for both afternoon and night games at Turner's. So amazing is the fan-interest in the Bears that the team can now sell the same attraction twice in a single day.

But the fan-interest is no more amazing then the Bears themselves. They may be, as their followers claim, the best basketball team in the country. Twice within the past year they have bumped off the Detroit Eagles, a mixed team of colored and white players who won the national pro title in a Chicago tournament. The last time they played, the Bears won by 20 points, breezing.

The guiding spirit of the Bears is Tarzan Cooper, who plays center and coaches the team which he assembled in New York and brought to Washington intact. U-Street has blown its topper over the Bears, Cooper, "Bricktop" White, Sonny Woods, "Puggy" Bell, Johnny Isaacs, Charley Isles, "Pop" Gates and "Dolly" King.

They play basketball only one day a week, and the only practice they get as a team is the twenty minutes on the floor before the start of a ball game. They play on Sunday because that's their day off from their defense-plant jobs in New York. Cooper works at a Navy Yard. Isaac, Gates and King have jobs in the Grumman airplane factory. Wright, Woods and Isles make radios for submarines in a New York plant.

They're no green-peas at basketball. Cooper and most of the others used to play with the famed Rennaissance Club and the Harlem Globe-Trotters when those teams were the country's best pro clubs or close to it. They had to get out of the touring basketball business when war came along, so they took defense jobs and confined their basketball to their Sunday off-days.

Cooper, a seven-foot six-incher, with arms and legs to match, is the center, and dynamite when he plays the ball off the backboard. Isaac and Bell, who play the back court, are the fans favorites with their dazzling passes. They are the pair who clown it for the fans when the Bears are far out in front and want to put on a show.

For the Sunday games here, the payroll isn't big because of the limited capacity of Turner's Arena. But the players can average 40 bucks for their afternoon's work. Cooper, as the coach and star player of the outfit, gets a lot more. When they double up in afternoon and night engagements they can make as much in their off-day basketball as they do in a week at their defense plant jobs.

Calling the Bears a fine basketball team is a technical foul on U-Street, however. They think the Bears are wonderful.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

The Army is planning the greatest boxing tournament in history. It will be almost twice as big as the A. E. F. championships, which engaged the active or rooting interest of 2,000,000 doughboys.

It will be an amateur tournament in all probability, which will eliminate the Army's and world's No. 1 and 2 heavyweights—Sergt Joe Louis and Corpl. Billy Conn. But barring the tournament to pros is expected to stimulate interest and provide a larger list of entrants.

CONSIDINE

Competition will be confined to the millions of soldiers now training in this country. Each camp will run tournaments in every weight class. These champions will in turn compete against other camp champions, then against area champions, and so on until the finals are held.

Announcement of the tournament is being held up because it has not yet been decided whether to stage it solely for the entertainment of the troops or permit the public to gain admission to the matches.

Also under consideration is a proposal to stage preliminary proceedings in the camps, for soldiers only, and produce the final matches in some large arena, admit the public, and turn over receipts to Army Emergency Relief. All officers concerned are determined that the gigantic tournament will in no way be commercialized.

It was the A. E. F. championships of the last war which launched boxing on the gold standard. The tremendous interest that tournament aroused not only among the expeditionary force, but also in this country, increased interest in the game a thousand-fold.

Out of the grueling A. E. F. championships emerged some of the best fighting men of the 1920's—including the incomparable Gene Tunney, winner of the A. E. F. light-heavyweight title.

We were talking to Commander Tunney today about that tournament.

"It was a tremendous competition," he recollected. "Countless thousands of men entered the tournament. I won my title in Paris in my thirty-second match. Bob Martin had to fight 39 or 40 times before he won the heavyweight title.

"Some of the eliminations were held in camps along the Rhine, others in the south of France, others in Brest . . . wherever there was a good concentration of men. There was never an admission charge. A uniform was a man's ticket."

Commander Tunney believes that the proposed Army tournament would be considerably bigger and better and that out of it, for future reference, will come dozens of first-class fighters.

He believes in keeping it in the camps until the finals.

"You could put the finals in Soldier Field in Chicago and they'd outdraw the Tunney-Dempsey fight," he said.

Krauser and Referee Team-up To Stop Meanie, Yellow Mask

Max Krauser, materially aided by Referee Casey Berger and a technicality, won the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night when the villainous Yellow Mask was disqualified for strangling after 35 minutes of action.

Krauser was just about to throw in the towel after the Hooded One had used a pair of lethal Cobra clutches on him. However, the arbiter ruled that the last grip was a strangle hold, and he awarded the disturbance to Krauser as 1000 fans nodded approval.

Freddy Grobmier won the semi-final from Jack Kelly when the Irishman was unable to continue after taking an unexpected dive out of the ring. The brawl lasted only 17 minutes, but throughout the script Kelly spent most of his time in dire straits. Twice Kelly threw body blocks typical of the Chicago Bears, but Grobby rallied like a Redskin to outlast his opponent.

Johnny (Tripod) Long defeated Jim Austeri with a flying head scissors in 24 minutes. Austeri was the villain all the way, but, as usual, virtue triumphed as Long rallied from a brutal beating in the closing minutes.

Emil Dusek and Michele Leone performed to a very rugged draw in the opening bout. As usual, Leone did everything but crucify his opponent, and Dusek was a top-heavy favorite with the fans.

A captain in the Army Air Corps, World War I, (Dutch) Arthur J. Bergman succeeded a lieutenant in the United States Navy, World War II, Ray Flaherty, as head coach of the Pro Champion Washington Redskins it was announced yesterday noon, just a few hours after Bergman signed a three-year contract.

Flaherty, who piloted the Redskins to two league titles and four Eastern Division crowns in seven years as head coach of the 'Skins, severed all connections with the Redskins when he resigned after receiving his Navy Commission in December, according to George P. Marshall, president.

Flaherty did not ask for a leave of absence and submitted his choice for his successor after resigning. Faherty, 39 and single, applied for his commission last August when the team was in training in San Diego.

Edwards Signs

Turk Edwards, the all-time pro league tackle, signed with the Redskins for the twelfth season late yesterday afternoon, receiving a substantial increase over his 1942 salary as assistant coach. The Redskins have also offered Wayne Millner an assistant coach's berth but Millner has not received final action on his application for a commission in the Navy. If his commission is not approved he will return to the 'Skins, and not Notre Dame.

Bergman, who turned down three offers to return to college coaching since leaving Catholic University in 1940, thus follows his former coach at Notre Dame, Gus Dorais, into the pro league. Dorais was recently named coach of the Detroit Lions.

Bergman will resign his position as administrative assistant in the aviation section of the RFC within a month. Dutch was in the First World War for 27 months, serving 14 months overseas. He is 47 years old.

Bergman takes a full-time position in pro football after being connected with the game in a minor capacity since 1939. For two years he was commentator on the Redskin broadcasts, in 1941 was an official, and the past season served as Redskin scout. His scouting job on the Bears played a major part in the Redskins' upset triumph.

Dutch played under Knute Rockne and Dorais at Notre Dame and coached college football for 20 years before he resigned at C. U. when the school abandoned football.

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—Willie Pep of Hartford, New York recognized featherweight champion, and Sammy Angott of Washington, Pa., who gave up the world lightweight title a few months ago, signed today for a 15-round bout at Madison Square Garden March 19.

Virginia Gold Cup Races Are Canceled

By the Associated Press

Warrenton, Va., Feb. 17.—The Virginia Gold Cup races, one of the East's principal steeplechase events, will not be held this year because of wartime conditions.

The cancellation of the 1943 races, planned for the first Saturday in May, was ordered by the race committee of the Virginia Gold Cup Association after cancellation of the Maryland Hunt and Grand National and other timber races in the midatlantic section.

G. U.-Maryland Meet Saturday In Ninth Game

Maryland's three-game winning streak, plus the Old Liners' record of having upset the Hoyas in two of their last three meetings, has shortened the odds on a Georgetown victory in the ninth renewal of the modern G. U.-Terp series Saturday night in Ritchie Coliseum.

Georgetown will be bidding for its sixth straight triumph and will be out to make an impressive showing before invading Madison Square Garden Monday for a meeting with St. John's. The Hoyas' Andy Kostecka will be making his last home appearance before his Army induction Tuesday.

The Hoyas have been idle since last Thursday's victory over Fordham but Coach Elmer Ripley has been staging daily practice sessions to condition the club for its toughest string of games of the year, and its bid for post-season honors.

American U. Plays Here; C. U. Away

American University, apparently confined to sixth place in the Mason Dixon Conference for the season, will have an opportunity to make a bid for a higher level when the Eagles entertain the cellar dwelling Bridgewater College club tonight on the A. U. floor at 8:15. A. U. will present the two top-average scorers in town in George Zuras and Bart Fugler.

Catholic University, upset victor over Western Maryland in their first meeting, will journey to Westminster for a return engagement tonight.

No Clock, Few Goals Give Lions an Unhappy Night

By Walter Haight

The new $14,000 time clock failed to operate as advertised at Uline Arena last night. The hands failed to arrive. The Washington Lions, however, were there with their hands in place, but they also failed to operate. In fact, the Capital's American League representatives absorbed their worst local beating, a 10-2 drubbing from the league-leading Hershey Bears. Some 2,000 fans watched the slaughter.

Peggy O'Neil and Tony Graboski, a pair of former Lions, had a field night at the expense of their former teammates. O'Neil got two goals and a pair of assists while Graboski hammered in two goals and had one assist. Frank Mailley and Herb Foster came through with the Lions' widely separated scores.

Bears Score First

Hershey kept the puck in Washington territory in the opening minutes but Goalie Paul Gauthier came through with spectacular saves. The first score came at 8:30 when Peggy O'Neil, former Lion, used a screen of Bears to send a shot skidding into the goal. Graboski made it 2-0 Hershey when he made use of assists from Kilrea and Frost to score at 17:50. The Bears' Johnson was forced to sit out the final two minutes of the period, but the Lions were unable to retain possession of the puck long enough to be productive.

The Lions assured themselves of escaping a shutout in the second period when Frank Mailley came though with a brilliant poke from the blue line after receiving the puck from Nakina Smith. The score came after 7:25 and offset a marker made by Sorrell of the Bears at 5:42. The Bears, however, lengthened their advantage as the period progressed. Tom Depew pounded a shot through Goalie Gauthier at 8:04 and Peggy O'Neil made it two successes for the night at 17:12 with Billy Moe, his teammate, in the penalty box at the time.

Ross Praised As Boxing's 'Man of Year'

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 17.—From a half world away, Marine Corpl. Barney Ross tonight was given the Edward J. Neil Memorial Plaque as boxing's "Man of the Year" for 1942, along with the unanimous verbal greetings praising him as a greater champion now than when he was the world's top man in three fistic divisions.

The plaque came from the Boxing Writers' Association of New York and the words were tossed at the association's fifth annual dinner at Ruppert's brewery by such old hands at the championship game as Lieut. Comdr. Jack Dempsey of the Coast Guard, Lieut. Jim Braddock of the Army, and Lieut. Benny Leonard of the Merchant Marine.

All knew Barney well in his heyday when he was ruling the lightweight, welterweight and junior welterweight affairs, but all of them, along with such others in the crowd of 300 as former Mayor James J. Walker, who made the presentation of the plaque, and Marine Col. Harvey L. Miller, who accepted the trophy in Barney's absence, maintained he was just a preliminary boy then compared with the job he has done since on Guadalcanal.

Military Olympic Games Planned

London, Feb. 17 (AP).—Tentative plans have been laid to hold military Olympic games for picked athletes from the United Nations this summer if war conditions permit, it was learned today.

If present plans go through, the international carnival would see soldiers from at least nine nations compete in 10 different sports.

St. John's, Gonzaga Meet At Tech High

Beginning what promises to be a fitting windup to the scholastic basketball season hereabouts, a pair of bitter rivalries will be renewed for the second time this year today.

Of strictly local interest is the second meeting of Gonzaga and St. John's with the Catholic Prep title hinging on the outcome. A full house at Tech gym is anticipated for the 8:15 battle tonight.

Winner of this year's first meeting of the teams, 38-32, St. John's will be a predominant favorite. It holds one wide decision over Georgetown Prep, the other member of the league, while Gonzaga has beat the Little Hoyas twice. In outside action, however, the Johnnies have won 14 of their 18 starts while the Purple was taking 10 out of 14.

Another one-sided favorite today will be George Washington High of Alexandria as it entertains its northern Virginia foe, Washington-Lee, in a 3 o'clock game. The first engagement between the teams went to G. W., 38-37, but off their later efforts the Presidents figure to win this one handily.

The game will be doubly important to G. W. because of its bearing on the State championship tournament. A victory will put the Presidents in a fair way to bid for the State crown.

Keogan, Irish Basketball Coach, Dies Suddenly

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 17.—George Keogan, head coach of basketball at Notre Dame, died suddenly here tonight.

Keogan, who would have been 43 years old on March 8, became head basketball coach at Notre Dame in the fall of 1923. His 1942-43 team has lost only one game so far, which compares favorably with the Irish record for several other seasons under Keogan's direction.

Keogan had had to relinquish his coaching duties temporarily several times in recent years because of recurring ill health.

Restricted Sports to Continue

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 17.—The presidents of Harvard, Yale and Princeton—the Big Three—announced today in a joint statement that because of war time conditions they believed "that the continued maintenance of 'athletics as usual' at these three institutions is no longer feasible."

Released through President James Bryant Conant of Harvard, the statement said:

"We have recognized the necessity of drastic modification in our schedules of intercollegiate sports.

"We hope to continue some such sports upon a restricted and informal basis, but realize the extent to which this can be accomplished must depend on the plans of the armed forces and the Office of Defense Transportation, as well as upon the revised calendar and enrollment in each institution concerned.

"For such athletics as may continue, provisions in the three presidents' agreement regarding eligibility of players and other related matters will be revised from time to time to meet conditions as they then exist."

Declaring that normal conditions under which intercollegiate athletics are carried on at the three colleges "have been profoundly altered by the needs of the present war effort," the statement added:

"Among the changed conditions are the reduction in the numbers of students, the adoption of accelerated and intensified academic calendars, the extensive use of college facilities by the Army and Navy for training of men in uniform, and the difficulties of transportation."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Significant Test Vote

THE HOUSE of Representatives' ban on free mailing privileges of Government departments without congressional okay is much more significant than Administration leaders admit.

It shows that the Republicans today really rule the House of Congress.

They won by the narrow margin of 204 to 201. It was a test case. Administration leaders vigorously opposed the mail ban on the ground it would interfere with vital Army and Navy mail.

For some time Democratic leaders have expected growing defections in Democratic ranks, chiefly among Southern and farm Congressmen. However, the leaders were not prepared for the technique the coalitionists used in this case.

Actually only six anti-New Deal Democrats voted for the Keefe amendment banning free mail for Government bureaus without congressional okay. What spelled defeat for the Administration was the fact that 19 other Democrats, including 11 from the South, led by Representative Hatton Sumners of Texas, did not vote, thus assuring a Republican victory.

A few were legitimate absentees, including Representative Jack Cochran of Missouri, who has been ill. But the majority absented themselves deliberately, according to House leaders. Representative Sumners and others were reported seen on the floor just before the vote, but disappeared when the clerk began to call the roll.

Besides Sumners and Cochran, other absentees were Representatives Abernethy of Mississippi, Bland of Virginia, Boykin of Alabama, Bryson of South Carolina, Clark of North Carolina, Cullen of New York, Lewis of Colorado, McGranery of Pennsylvania, Maloney of Louisiana, Mansfield of Texas, Morrison of Louisiana, Norton of New Jersey, Sheridan of Pennsylvania and Steagall of Alabama.

NOTE: Democratic coalitionists have decided to use the "stay-away" technique rather than outright voting against the Administration. On close votes, it is just as effective, since House Republicans usually vote solidly on all measures. Only two Republicans—Burdick of North Dakota and Miller of Connecticut—out of 197 on the floor, were recorded against the free mail ban.

Senator From New Mexico

WHEN VICE PRESIDENT Guani of Uruguay was in Washington he was entertained at luncheon by the Vice President of the United States.

After luncheon, Vice President Guani spoke eloquently, paying tribute to the good neighbor policy, and for the benefit of the Americans present his speech was translated from Spanish into English by Senator Chavez of New Mexico. Senator Chavez has many Spanish-Americans among his constituents and prides himself on his knowledge of Spanish.

After Guani finished, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader, rose to reply. He spoke eloquently in English. And Senator Chavez rose to translate into Spanish for the benefit of the Uruguayan Vice President.

But after a few sentences, Vice President Guani interrupted:

"I think," he said, "that I can understand Senator Barkley's English better than I can Senator Chavez's Spanish."

Investigating Martin Dies

TWO decisions were made at the first closed-door meeting of the House Appropriations Subcommittee named to review Dies Committee charges of un-Americanism against certain Government employes.

The subcommittee, headed by fair-minded Representative John H. Kerr of North Carolina, decided first to hear only the individuals against whom the charges have been made. No character witnesses will be permitted to testify except in unusual cases.

Second, the committee decided to throw out any cases in which there is the slightest doubt about accused employes' loyalty to the United States. The fact that an employe has been a member or has attended meetings of a so-called Communist "front" group won't be considered sufficient evidence to oust him from his job, in the eyes of the reviewing subcommittee.

This is significant, because virtually all the evidence the Dies Committee has on Federal workers is based on connections with "front" organizations, like the League for Peace and Democracy, now disbanded.

Chairman Kerr insisted that there must be conclusive proof of un-Americanism before any employe is discharged, since "what we do may ruin a man and his family for life." Kerr urged supercaution in dealing with all cases, and he was vigorously supported by the other members of the subcommittee, Lane Powers of New Jersey, Frank Keefe of Wisconsin, Albert Gore of Tennessee and Clinton Anderson of New Mexico.

Representative Powers said the slogan of the committee should be a saying which had been drilled into him at his alma mater, Pennsylvania Military College: "When wealth is lost, nothing is lost; when health is lost, something is lost; when character is lost, all is lost."

Rest Your Horse's Shoes

Many a farmer got a horse laugh out of that WPB suggestion that horseshoes should be removed when not in use. And WPB has been deluged with mail (not exactly fan mail) calling the officials all sorts of names.

One farmer wrote, "The Gov. should send you out on a Southern farm with the other mules."

All letters were addressed to that unhappy Harvard graduate, Edward R. Gay, son of the former dean of the Harvard School of Business and onetime editor of the New York Evening Post. It was over Gay's signature that the letter went out suggesting that a lot of things could be done to save horseshoes. One was to eliminate some of the 100 different styles or patterns of horseshoes.

Another was that "horse owners can, in many cases, save shoes by removing the shoes immediately after a period of necessary road work."

From behind its red face, the WPB hastens to explain that (1) It was not Harvardman Gay who composed the letter, but farm-born Verne Gregg of the Department of Agriculture; and (2) WPB really means what it says about taking off the horse's shoes.

It's a simple matter, says Gregg, to pull the nails out of a shoe at the end of a season of road work, when the horse is going to be in pasture. Otherwise, the shoes will probably be lost in pasture, and in the spring Dobbin will have to come back to town for new iron that can be used for better purpose in the war.

Ex-Capone Members Accused Of Running Black Meat Market

By International News Service

Chicago, Feb. 17.—Former members of the Al Capone gang were accused tonight of operating a black market in meat in Chicago and the Midwest in a statement by a high official of the meat industry who asked that he not be identified.

The charges were partially substantiated by Alex Olson, attorney for the Office of Price Administration, who said:

"It looks as though the Capone syndicate is mixed up in this deeply."

In addition to investigating the gang's purchase of a Chicago slaughter house, Olson said, "we are also investigating a strong report that the syndicate has taken over a small packing plant in Omaha."

The meat packing official described the gang's modus operandi in the black market.

"So bold has the gang become in its eagerness to bring back the days of fabulous prohibition riches," he said, "that one Capone-ite has just bought a packing house right in Chicago.

"The gang won't stop at anything, any more than they did during prohibition.

"That means they may use fake seals—even Government inspection seals and the stamps of reputable packing houses.

"They won't be squeamish about the quality and the source of the meat they buy, either."

The gang's agents are touring the farm lands, buying stock direct from farmers at prices above the Chicago market, he said.

If the place of purchase is some distance from Chicago, the animals are slaughtered on the spot, under unsanitary conditions, and the meat trucked into Chicago. Otherwise, the animals are trucked into Chicago and slaughtered at the gang's slaughterhouse.

Needless to say, there is a ready market, both as regards retailers and consumers.

Evidence of price ceiling violation is difficult to obtain, since the retailer is equally guilty as the wholesaler.

The black market was tailor-made for the Capone gang.

The fortunes of the gang have been on the decline in recent years with the advent of repeal, Federal investigation of labor racketeering to which the mob had turned, the imprisonment of Al and a number of his chieftans for income tax evasion and finally Al's retirement.

Army Plane Makes A Crash Landing At Blue Plains

An Army corporal was slightly hurt yesterday when a United States Army training plane made a forced landing on the property of the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains, D. C.

Five police scout cars and the fire rescue squad ambulance were dispatched to the scene when it was first reported the plane had crashed. They were quickly recalled, however, when it was learned the plane's pilot managed a "crash" landing without serious injury to himself or passengers.

The only casualty was Corpl. Frederick J. Polkaw. He suffered superficial lacerations to his face.

Citizens Group Seeks District Restrictions

Efforts to restrict their neighborhood to white residents, through adoption of a covenant agreement, were indorsed last evening by the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association.

Details of the covenant will be explained at a mass meeting to be held next Wednesday in Woodrow Wilson High School, beginning at 7:30 p. m.

Canned Meat, Fish Sales Halted

go into full effect March 1.

Sales were ordered frozen at all levels, but wholesalers were allowed to acquire additional stocks. Purchases for the armed services, lend-lease, and the Food Distribution Administration were exempt from the freeze.

Wholesalers were given two weeks to report their inventories unless they already filed a report on January stocks with OPA.

Technical definitions contained in the order restricted the freeze to hermetically sealed containers of any type (including glass) which are heat-treated. Pigs feet, tidbits (of pigs feet), dried beef in glass and other items which are not sealed and heat-treated were exempt, along with pharmaceutical products, pork and beans, and fish chowders.

Civilian consumption of canned meat has declined from an average of 4 pounds a person in 1941 to 2 pounds in 1942 because of military requirements. Canned fish consumption by civilians declined from 5.2 pounds a person in the 1935 to 1939 period to 2.2 pounds last year, and an estimated 1.9 pounds this year.

Dallas Schools Fashion Knives For Close Pacific Fighting

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 17 (AP).—Dark night in a Pacific jungle . . . patrols . . . the slither of steel . . . the blade of a knife wiped clean . . . and one more Jap is dead.

Perhaps a knife of the sort Jim Bowie used and made famous with his name, or one modeled after those the Sioux Indians handled so well.

Both kinds, fashioned from discarded hacksaw blades and files by a group of Dallas boys, are going to war to prove their worth as weapons or utility as tools.

The boys—students of Crozier Technical High School here—shaped a few by hand, sent them to soldiers, sailors, and marines. This week they set up a regular factory production line.

They've been getting letters such as this from a soldier in Guadalcanal: "I need something to slash off my pack when we're surprised. Something, too, to use at close quarters."

Ed Thatcher, a retired mechanical engineer whose hobby is metallurgy, and the school's machine shop instructor, P. W. Loucks, put their heads together. Hacksaw blades were the first available material.

From his private edged weapons collection Thatcher took a Sioux knife for a pattern, but went a bit further, left one edge sharp enough to shave; the other with its hacksaw teeth.

"They slice right through barbed wire, and are useful for ripping containers," says Thatcher.

The first supply of hacksaws, which had come from war plants, ran short. An aircraft plant offered all the files the boys could use.

Thatcher dug into his weapon collection again, found a Texas bowie knife. Delicately balanced. Heavy enough to swing with vicious hiss. Now the knifemakers turn out both styles, but more of the bowies.

Tires in Thousands Destroyed by Fire

Kansas City, Feb. 17 (AP).—Between 10,000 and 15,000 new automobile tires were burned today in a $500,000 fire that destroyed a large warehouse and recapping plant of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

One thousand old tires, consigned by customers, also fed the fire as did a stock of 600 bicycles.

Phony Victim Of Japs Arrested

Detroit, Feb. 17 (AP).—Among the residents in the police headquarters jail today was a housewife whose efforts to "help the war spirit" led her to pose as a missionary and recite tales of torture from the Japanese to luncheon clubs and church groups.

"I didn't think I was doing anything wrong," she said.

War Financing Load on Banks Cited by Eccles

By the Associated Press

Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve System board of governors told the Senate Banking Committee yesterday that the United States is doing a "very bad" job of war financing by comparison with other countries.

This country, he testified, is financing a "much larger" percentage of its deficit by borrowing through banks instead of directly from the people than other nations. Taxation also is financing a smaller share of the borrowing than in other countries, he said.

Eccles appeared in support of a bill by Senator Wagner (Democrat) of New York which would eliminate Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation assessments on war loan deposits in banks during the war and six months afterward. He said enactment of the measure would bring between 80 and 90 per cent of the Nation's bank resources into the war financing program.

Committee members diverted the discussion toward inflation, and Eccles said:

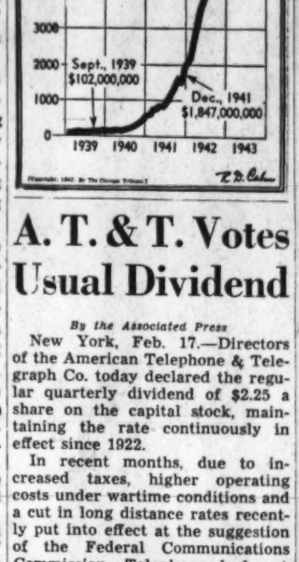
"No government in a war period has been able to avoid inflation."

He added, however, that inflation "only can come by Congress appropriating money and failing to provide a method of collecting the money."

Leo T. Crowley, FDIC chairman, also testified for the Wagner bill, saying "we have been told that many bankers have made representations to the Treasury to the effect that they are loath to participate in the handling of war loan deposits because of our assessment of one-twelfth of 1 per cent per annum."

The committee reported the bill favorably.

COST OF THE WAR



A. T. & T. Votes Usual Dividend

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 17.—Directors of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share on the capital stock, maintaining the rate continuously in effect since 1922.

In recent months, due to increased taxes, higher operating costs under wartime conditions and a cut in long distance rates recently put into effect at the suggestion of the Federal Communications Commission, Telephone had not fully earned the $9 annual rate on its capital stock. The preliminary statement for 1942, recently published, showed earnings equal to $8.62 a share.

Today's disbursement of more than 42 million dollars will go to some 634,000 shareholders on April 15 to stock of record March 15.

Insurance Sales Continue Slump

New York, Feb. 17 (AP).—New life insurance written in January showed the widest comparative decline in any month in recent years due in part to an especially heavy volume in January, 1942.

The Association of Life Insurance Presidents reported today the total in January was $576,482,000, compared with $959,393,000 in that month a year ago. The January, 1942, total was 66.8 per cent above that for the first month in 1941. The aggregate of group insurance written in January was 91 per cent above last year but the increase was insufficient to overcome sharp declines in ordinary and industrial policies written.

ICC Hearing Set March 1 on Erie Bond Dispute

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission ordered a hearing March 1 on the petition of the Erie Railroad Co. for authority to sell $14,000,000 of 3½ per cent bonds to Morgan Stanley & Co., New York investment bankers, at 96 per cent for resale to others at 97½ per cent.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, which owns some Erie stock, has protested against the sale on the ground that it has been informed that Erie could have gotten and still could get a better price for the bonds from a Middle West banking group.

Erie has sold the bonds subject to ICC approval and, in contemplation of proceeds from the issue, has paid off a $14,000,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Morgenthau Held Opposing Wickard Plan

W. L. Hemingway, president of the American Bankers Association, yesterday told the Economy Committee in the Senate that he believed Treasury Secretary Morganthau considers the food-production credit policies of the Department of Agriculture a menace to the impending Victory Loan drive.

A Treasury Department spokesman, meanwhile, stated that he did not believe Morganthau has gone so far as to protest formally to Agriculture Secretary Wickard against Wickard's revival of the depression-born Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation.

The spokesman remarked, however, on the reliance Morgenthau is placing upon the country's banks to achieve success in the drive. The Treasury secretary has indicated, he said, that he would like to see bankers "happier."

Bankers Hit Plan

Under the aegis of A. L. M. Wiggins, chairman of the association's committee on Federal legislation, seven bankers and farm leaders were paraded before the committee in bitter opposition to Wickard's farm credit policies. The hearing was held on a resolution by Senator Wherry (Republican) of Nebraska, calling for an investigation of allocation of 235 million dollars in lending money to the revived corporation.

Hemingway called Wickard's plan "shocking" and compared it to a flank attack on rural bankers.

George, a member of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonesential Federal Expenditures which heard the testimony, predicted that revival of the corporation, accused by one witness of sanctioning "gambling-type loans," would "torpedo the whole effort of the Government to meet financing obligations in the near future."

Would Be Concerned

While not "presuming" to know Morgenthau's mind on the subject, George declared: "If I were the Secretary of the Treasury, I would be profoundly concerned by this very move."

Albert Goss, master of the National Grange, declared "This just opens up another lending agency of the type we have been trying to shut off."

Wickard announced several weeks ago that one-year 5 per cent loans, up to a total of 225 million dollars, would be made available to farmers for production of vital war crops. The funds would be obtained by rediscounting the notes to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. or its subsidiaries. Goss estimated that as much as 500 million dollars finally might be made available.

C. D. Haskell, Laurel, Nebr., farmer, said the Government already operates three lending agencies in his county and that manpower and machinery were the farmers' worries, not credit, which he said could be had already at 4½ per cent interest.

I. R. Alter, Grand Island, Nebr., banker, called the RACC "subsidized competition" and "unnecessary."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 17 (AP).—Strength in the corn pit, where three of the four contracts traded closed at Office of Price Administration ceilings, imparted a firm undertone to other grains today and prices advanced fractionally.

A late upturn in wheat sent the May contract to a new five-year peak, while the July and September contracts were the highest in 15 months. In the trade, No 2 red wheat sold at $1.61 a bushel, the top price here for any variety of wheat since 1928.

At close wheat showed gains of ⅛ to ¾. May, 1.41@1.42; July, 1.41⅞; corn gained ⅛ to ½, May, 99⅞@99¾; oats advanced ½ to ¾, rye jumped ⅜ to ⅞, and there was no trade in soybeans.

Closing of ⅔ of U.S. Gas Stations Urged

Defense Step

75 Schools To Be Used as Billet Posts

Washington took two steps nearer a more complete civilian defense organization yesterday when the Board of Education voted that 78 public schools would be used for evacuation and billeting points in time of emergency, and the civilian defense department turned on the newly adopted air raid signals.

Areas in the following 14 junior and senior high schools will be used for billeting while 64 elementary schools will be used for evacuation of persons made homeless by an air raid:

Areas in the following schools will be utilized for billeting purposes: Western, Roosevelt, Anacostia, Eastern(McKinley, Cardozo, Dunbar, Woodrow Wilson, Coolidge and Central High Schools, and Jefferson, Randall, Francis and Banneker Junior High Schools. The proper school civilian defense and Red Cross officials have inspected these areas and found them suitable.

The new air raid warnings, which will replace the usual noonday toots, consisted of a long, steady wail of the Blue preparatory warning, and the mixed staccato and fluctuating notes of the Red immediate warning. The former sounded from 12:01 and the latter, after a minute's interval, for the next two minutes.

Radio stations, all but one of which broke into their usual 12 o'clock programs with explanations of the two alarms, will continue their share of the educational program through Saturday. After Saturday, the old time noonday howl will again be given regularly, but only as a signal of noonday.

Sinclair Asks Consolidation of Entire Industry

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 17.—Oilman Harry F. Sinclair today virtually invited the Governmeant to issue a directive consolidating the oil industry and automatically closing two-thirds of the gas service stations in the Nation.

This expedient is necessary to the "winning of the war," Sinclair said in a prepared statement released here by an assistant, D. T. Pierce, who said Sinclair believed this was the only "out" for the oil industry and was "willing to let the chips fall where they may."

Closing of all bulk plants, supply outlets and service stations not essential to the limited need of each State and community would immediately create a manpower group which is not at present available to war industries and the "problem can not be sidestepped any longer," Sinclair's statement said.

He said the industry had recommended consolidation of marketing facilities and had been urged by a directive from the Petroleum Administration last September to economize on labor and material by "joint use of facilities," but that "practically nothing" had been done by the industry in this direction.

"The Petroleum Administration for War, itself, has done all it can do except order us to do what we should do without compulsion," Sinclair said.

"On September 25 of last year it issued Directive No. 59, which was in effect a Magna Charta for the industry to begin with the pooling of terminal facilities and the handling of transportation on a first-things-first basis. This was followed by Deputy Administrator Ralph K. Davies' letter of October 1, which carried further the scope of Directive No. 59."

"What has been done in response to these far-sighted recommendations? Practically nothing."

Sinclair said many oil companies found it difficult to use the pooling system recommended by Davies.

"They are holding on like grim death to practices which, if they ever were justifiable, have no place in a war economy. If they do not like to hear this said out loud it is up to them to disprove it."

Standard Oil Co. (N. J.) recently reported that the Atlantic pooling system in District 1 (the East Coast) was working out effectively and one executive said "we are sharing the shortage." Companies long on gasoline and short on fuel oil are dividing their stocks to make available supplies reach as far as possible. The chief problem, Standard said, was getting enough of all stocks at the pooling terminal.

Sinclair's spokesman said his recommendations were being sent to Manpower Commissioner McNutt, Petroleum Coordinator Ickes, WPB Chief Nelson, OPA Chief Brown and Deputy Petroleum Administrator Davies.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloist: Jose Iturbi. Program: Sarabanda, Giga e Badinerie (Corelli), Symphony No. 4 in E flat major, Op. 48 (Glazunov), Piano Concerto No. 3 in C minor, Op. 37 (Beethoven), Waltzes from "Der Rosenkavalier" (Richard Strauss).

Acclaimed for his masterly and powerful performance in Beethoven's third piano concerto with the National Symphony Orchestra last evening, Jose Iturbi insisted upon sharing his honors with Dr. Hans Kindler in a generous gesture approved by the audience. An excellent conductor in his own right, he knew how admirably the long introductory tutti had been set forth, how adroitly the accompaniments to the solo instrument had been adjusted, and how considerate had been the balance of dynamics. Small wonder, then, that he brought the conductor back with him in two of his half-dozen recalls as proof of his appreciation for a fine piece of teamwork. There were hand-clasps, too, for Concertmaster Millard Taylor, and as a final token of gratitude, the guest artist motioned the orchestra to its feet for a share of the ovation.

BROWN

Mr. Iturbi's reading of the concerto was in perfect keeping with the nature of the work. By the time he had come to the writing of his third concerto, young Beethoven had gained the confidence to upset the tradition that music of this kind was merely a medium for the display of a soloist's virtuosity. He made the piano an integral part of the instrumental scheme, a voice among other voices in the expression of the basic ideas of the work. He gave it a bold and assertive part, and boldly did Mr. Iturbi carry it through, without slighting, however, or making of less significance the lyric passages where beauty of tone and tenderness of touch were essential to the right interpretation. His performance was captivating in its confidence and stimulating in its vigor and virility.

Dr. Kindler came in for his due meed of congratulation in connection with the other major work of the evening, Glazunov's fourth symphony, which was added to the orchestra's repertoire on this occasion. Not only had he memorized the score, but in the process he had also acquired for it an affection that was patent in his eloquent projection of the music. His reading had verve and brilliance, and showed as well an insight into the poetic values. Whether or not it was intention to do so, he demonstrated that Glazunov is a neglected composer as far as the eight symphonies are concerned.

One noted in the fourth symphony positive qualities of the most attractive kind: thematic beauty, freshness of approach to the symphonic form, spontaneity of movement, emotional sincerity and craftsmanship capable of both amplitude and finesse. There is no waste rhetoric in the music, no posing for dramatic effect. A Russian flavor in the melodies is kept discreet and never emphasized for nationalistic purposes. Particularly enjoyable were the scherzo with its suggestion of woodland excursions, and the nocturne-like andante which leads directly into the carnival spirit of the finale.

The concert opened with a suite made up of three disparate movements from Arcangelo Corelli's sonatas, a work in the eighteenth-century style that has figured on the orchestra's programs several times before, always pleasantly. At the end came the semi-Viennese, semi-Mozartian waltzes from Richard Strauss' comic opera, "The Chevalier of the Rose."

A wastebasket blaze in the rest room had music lovers—including the Greek Minister and Madame Diamantopoulos—sniffing the air quizzically.

But the blaze, said to have started from a carelessly-thrown match, was quickly squelched by hall attendants, without any interruption in the program.

Army School Gunner Betrayed As Boy of 14 by Airsickness

By the Associated Press

Panama City, Fla., Feb. 17.—A 14-year-old North Dakota boy almost got the silver wings and sergeant chevrons at the flexible gunnery school here, but air-sickness gave him away.

The story of disclosure of the age of Albert E. Ennis, son of Mrs. Albert Ennis, Donnybrook, N. Dak., was told by Army officers today, who said he would be discharged.

Well built and eager, young Ennis made good marks in the Army Air Forces flexible gunnery school up to the final "air-to-air" firing test; then he became airsick.

"You look young," remarked an officer after the boy had been eliminated from the course by the flight surgeon.

"I'm 14½," said Albert.

Young Ennis said he enlisted in Minot, N. Dak., giving his age as 18.

Young Ennis said he would go back to school when he arrives home, but added:

"I still think I could pass that air-to-air firing if thye'd give me anther chance."

His mother didn't say much when he enlisted, he said, "but I guess she thought a lot."

Missing Teller Tried to Purchase Poison on Monday

John Rodney Young, 38, missing teller sought in connection with a $73,999.99 deficit at the Security Savings & Commercial Bank, attempted unsuccessfully to purchase a quantity of poison a short time after he left the bank Monday, it was learned yesterday.

This disclosure by a neighborhood drug store, which said Young declared he wanted the lethal dose "to poison a vicious dog," heightened the search, extended by the FBI to cover the entire Nation, for the missing man.

The original warrant for Young's arrest, issued Monday, charged him with embezzling $25,000. Subsequently, the exact amount of the deficit was found to be 1 cent less than $74,000, according to Francis Addison, jr., president of the bank.

Max Gordon Covets Four In a Row on Broadway

Plans War Play to Follow Three Comedy Hits; Theater Guild Seeks Open Date at National; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

MAX GORDON is up to his old tricks.

Recognized as one of Broadway's topflight producers, and never either abashed or retarded by the contemplation of a complete change of pace, the redoubtable Max now has it in mind to challenge his own sometime record of four hits in a row on Broadway by undertaking a war play. The title of the piece that has engaged his most recent attention is "Men in Shadow," a drama of Allied airmen shot down over the German lines in France. Already a hit in London, the new play is planned for an early March premiere in this country—on the cabled recommendation of Noel Coward, no less.

MAX GORDON

While this will mark a distinct departure from the groove Mr. Gordon has worn smooth with "My Sister Eileen," "Junior Miss" and "The Doughgirls," it signalizes no new departure from norm on his part. Back in the 1930's, he had four hits on the boards at once in "Dodsworth," "Roberta," "Her Master's Voice" and "The Shining Hour." A vast catholicity of taste has always been one of the trademarks of his productional activity.

The Gordon productions down the years have embraced every theatrical form from the gayest of light farces to such prodigious musical spectacles as "The Last Waltz." There seems to be no valid ground for suspicion that he cannot "do it again."

In cabling Max last summer, after the London opening, Mr. Coward described "Men in Shadow" in these words: "It's written with honesty, has integrity and dramatic impact and I believe should interest America enormously." Sounds almost as if Mr. Coward might have been describing his own picture, "In Which We Serve," currently fulfilling the same specifications on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. The Gordon production is being directed by Roy Hargrave, who also assumes the leading role of Lew, an American flier. This is the role created on the other side by John Mills, the "Shorty" Blake in "In Which We Serve." Opening it in Washington, Mr. Gordon?

And that reminds me. In a recent column we had something to say about "Away We Go"—the Theater Guild's musical version of Lynn Riggs' "Green Grow the Lilacs"—and the announcement that there were "no future bookings" after its two weeks in Boston. We asked Miss Helburn and Mr. Langner if they had forgotten that the Capital is one of their two-week subscriptions cities, too. So yesterday came this: "Dear Mr. Bell: We certainly do remember and we have tried our best to get bookings in Washington—but so far it hasn't been possible. We're terribly sorry! Cordial greetings. Sincerely, THERESA HELBURN." Come, come, Mr. Plohn, what goes on here?

Beating the Gun Again

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," starring James Cagney, in the title role, Joan Leslie and Walter Huston, in the stirring story of the life, music and all-around Americanism of the late George M. Cohan, will open on an advanced schedule at the Earle Theater tomorrow. Doors will open at 10:15 a. m., with the screen lighting up with the first projection of the bill at 10:45. Since the picture is being presented for the first time in Washington at popular prices, this is a wise precaution. It is the sort of work that deserves to pack any theater, of whatever capacity, to the roof at every performance. That is practically what it did as a "road show." No surprise at all if "Yankee Doodle Dandy" should win the Academy Award this year—along with Jimmy Cagney for his performance in the Cohan part.

Under the sponsorship of the District of Columbia Recreation Department, the Montgomery Players, in cooperation with the War Hospitality Committee, tomorrow night will give a free performance of Lillian Hellman's prize-winning play, "Watch on the Rhine," for warworkers and service personnel. The play will be presented at 8:45 o'clock at Leland Junior High School, Forty-fourth and Elm Streets Northwest, with Jane Plummer Rice, Peg Wolhaupter and Dolph Bishop in the roles created by Mady Christians, Lucile Watson and Paul Lukas. This splendid drama of a German fighting the Nazis is now being filmed with Bette Davis and Paul Lukas in the costellar parts.

Pvt. William Saroyan, whose "The Human Comedy" will be given its Broadway premiere by M-G-M in the Astor Theater on March 2, has been ordered to report at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, so probably will miss the New York opening of this widely discussed film. Now Bill knows how Thornton Wilder must have felt about his stage hit, "The Skin of Our Teeth." To the best of my knowledge, Mr. Wilder hasn't seen his play on the boards even yet!

Voice-from-the-Back-of-the-Hall Note

"Not even by the skin of his teeth?" Nope. Not even that.

The Anzac Heroes Ride Again

The fighting Anzac, whose fame is spread far and near for his heroic stand at Crete and his accomplishments in the East African campaign, is given due credit in a revival of "40,000 Horsemen" at the Little Theater.

To the accompanying strains of "Waltzing Matilda," traditional marching song of the men from "down under," Charles Chauvel has woven a film around the Anzacs' exploits during the Allenby campaign in Palestine, during the first World War, that contains all the color and lusty vigor of the men themselves.

The Australian army of 1917, who broke the German domination of the Holy Land, were of another generation, but their ability to meet and conquer the foe in the swirling desert sands was no less than the character of their sons who put the famed Afrika Korps to rout when Rommel's army was knocking at the doors of Alexandria.

Mounted on horses instead of today's roaring tanks, these earlier soldiers of the Island Continent comradeship and bravery which exhibited the same qualities of have made them so popular with our own soldiers stationed in Australia.

There is an abundance of action, comedy and spectacle in "40,000 Horsemen," built around the friendship of these soldiers. This trio embodies the playful spirit of the soldier in his moments away from battle, and his calm, unassuming courage in the face of death.

The three are excellently portrayed by Grant Taylor, "Chips" Rafferty and Pat Twohill. The one feminine role is competently handled by Betty Briant.

Donna Revives 'Farm Girl' Days

Donna Reed, pretty motion picture starlet, has gone into the chicken business—on a small scale.

It's the result of an unusual gift from a fan, who, like herself, hails from Iowa. Wanting to be sure that Donna was fed in "the manner to which a former farm girl would be accustomed," he sent her 15 big red hens.

Donna decided not to have the chickens killed, however. Instead, she made room for them in her back yard and now in these eggless days she doesn't have to worry. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress even takes care of the flock herself, and probably recalls the time, only two years ago, when she did similar chores on her father's large farm..

Apparently Worse Than the Injury!

LOU HOLTZ AND CONCHITA,
two of the stars of "Priorities of 1942," following Helen Hayes' "Harriet" at the National Theater, in a slightly disturbing demonstration of how not to apply first aid. Booked on E Street for two weeks, this gaudy, musical, variety show also includes Willie Howard, Bert Wheeler, Hank Ladd and Gene Sheldon among its celebrated comics

HEDDA HOPPER

Packs Away Her Suit!

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 17.—Hedy Lamarr's returning to work in Arthur Hornblow's picture at Metro, which must mean that some arrangements for a settlement of that lawsuit have been made. But so far, every one is keeping mum, including Hedy . . . Nice to know that Joe Louis has been given the green light to appear in Irving Berlin's picture "This Is the Army" . . . I'm laughing. Lady Korda makes another announcement. After three more pictures, including present one, she plans to retire. When she returned from entertaining our boys overseas, she made an announcement—she'd retire from our screen and return to England. The next day she went out and got herself a new agent and lined up three pictures. Seeing is believing, says I . . . "The Cat People," made for $138,000, and well on its way to gross over a million, will be followed by a sequel, "Curse of the Cat People" with Chet Smith and Jane Randolph. Too bad they killed off Simone Simon in the first. It's a new kind of horror dish.

HEDY LAMARR

Life Was Prankish Then

Winnie Sheehan telling me about his first date after arriving here years ago. He'd met Charlie Chaplin before, so Charlie suggested a party. Winnie said, "Okay, you find the girls." He did. Evidently Chaplin wasn't too well acquainted then, either. So Winnie found himself dancing with a couple of lion tamers from the old Selig zoo. . . . King Vidor heard to remark, after seeing "The Human Comedy," I thought I had a pretty good picture, but after seeing this, I'm afraid to begin."

Cast to Conjure With

Paul Lukas' addition to "Hostages" gives that one a superb cast, what with Luise Rainer, Arturo De Cordova, Oscar Homolka, Rex Williams, and Frank Tuttle directing. Luise Rainer asked for only simple clothes in this. Said she "If I were overdressed today, I'd be criticized as severely as though I had three turkeys and a couple of hams on the table at the same time." . . . Hollywood's thinking of having movie stars do movie shorts for foreign charities. . . . Gabin and Dietrich in the dimmest corner of Cock 'n' Bull, looking mighty glum after reconciliation. . . . Time marches on. Flora Robson delighted to be playing a quadroon in San Diego. Years ago, when Sir Herbert Tree was asked to play a colored gent, that was the straw that broke his contract.

Tit for Tat

Louis Calhern, who wrote a piece about touring in "Life With Father," has been asked to do his autobiography. He's started with a chapter "What My Children Might Have Been Like If I Had Any. I dare say they would have inherited all the unpleasant characteristics of my three former wives, including Ilka Chase." Sounds as though he's going to return the compliment Ilka paid him in her book . . . Betty Hutton let out an Indian war whoop when she told me studio's moving heaven and earth to get Humphrey Bogart to play with her in "Texas Guinan." . . . John Emery, beard and all, has replaced Vincent Price in "Angel Street" on Broadway. John's already yearning for Hollywood. . . . Director George Marshall telephoned his son in Georgia the other day. Offspring answered, "Hello, Pop! Some respect, please! You're now speaking to Corpl. George Marshall."

Food for Horses Eats All His Gas!

The generosity of Joel McCrea has enabled the horses of Joel's stand-in, Carl Andre, to know where their next food is coming from through the winter months.

Joel heard that Andre, who is working with him in Columbia's untitled George Stevens production, was seriously worried about the feed shortage as it might affect Andre's two animals stabled at Burbank. So Joel made four tons of hay available to Andre from the meager supply at the actor's Ventura County stock ranch.

Andre loaded and hauled the 60-odd bales of the feed from the ranch to Burbank, but it used up nearly the entire tank of precious gasoline in his light truck.

2 D.C. Pilots Are Awarded Air Medals

Presentation of Air Medals to two men from this section was announced yesterday by United States Army Headquarters in London.

The pilots honored were Capt. Thomas R. Cramer, son of Mrs. R. V. Cramer, 5701 Chevy Chase Parkway, and Maj. Harry J. Holt, whose parents, Capt. Fred W. Holt, U. S. N., and Mrs. Holt, live at 417 Essex Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md.

No mention was made of the exploits for which the men were decorated, but it was assumed here that the answer was air raids over the continent. Captain Cramer is known to be the pilot of a B-24 (Liberator) and Major Holt was mentioned last fall in war dispatches which told how a flight of Flying Fortresses, led by him, destroyed nine German fighter planes during a raid on St. Nazaire, France.

Cramer is the son of the late Lieut. Col. R. V. Cramer, who died here about 4 years ago. He was born at West Point, N. Y., came here with his family in 1930 and attended District public schools, graduating from Western High. He is a graduate of West Point, class of '41, and received his air training at Randolph and Kelly Fields.

His mother said last night that Captain Cramer, 23, went to England early last October. His last letter, dated January 30, contained no mention of his impending decoration, she said.

Major Holt was born in Washington, but as a member of a Navy family got his education on the fly pretty much all over the country. His father was assigned here long enough at one time for Holt to attend and graduate from Devitt Prep going from there to the Naval Academy. He attended the academy for three years, but, because "he had always wanted to fly," as his mother explained last night, he left the academy and went to Kelly Field, took flight training, and wound up in the Army Air Forces. His wife resides with Major Holt's parents.

Committee Votes Increase in NHA Authorization

The Senate Banking Committee approved yesterday a bill by Senator Radcliffe (Democrat) of Maryland increasing the authorization of the National Housing Act from $800,000,000 to $1,200,000,000 for the period ending July 1, 1944.

Testifying in support of the bill were Abner H. Ferguson of the Federal Housing Administration and Leon Keyserling of National Housing Agency, who told of a need to continue the National Housing program, especially in the Nation's war-production areas.

In May, 1942 the authorization was increased from 300 million dollars to 800 million dollars.

Toll Rises to Nine In School Bus Crash

The two drivers and six other children were injured but are expected to recover.

Guerilla Chief In Serbia Held Ally of Axis

By the Associated Press

London, Thursday, Feb. 18.—The Daily Herald said today that the Soviet government had sent a note to the Yugoslav government here formally accusing Draja Mihailovic, Serb guerilla chieftain, of "collaborating" with the Axis.

The newspaper described this report as "the most difficult inter-Allied situation that has arisen during the war."

The Soviet government, this report said, had told the Yugoslav government-in-exile here that it had proof of its charges against Mihailovic.

The same allegation against the general was raised by some quarters two months ago, and the Yugoslav government at that time issued a statement that Mihailovic still was to be regarded as the center of Yugoslav resistance.

At that time during a reorganization of the Yugoslav cabinet here Mihailovic was retained as War Minister, a post he had held since January 12, 1942.

Took to Mountains

Mihailovic took to the Serbian mountains with the remnants of regular army troops who escaped the German conquest of that country. There he organized a striking force that has been estimated at 100,000 men.

But a few months ago there were persistent reports that all was not well in Yugoslavia—that the guerillas were fighting each other as well as the Germans and Italians.

The name of Kosta Nagy emerged as leader of a group opposing Mihailovic and his men. He is said to be head of a Communist-led partisan group taking a more active hand against the Axis than Mihailovic.

Recognized by U. S., Britain

Published reports have said that Soviet Russia backed the partisans, whereas the United States and Britain considered Mihailovic the rightful leader.

The Yugoslav information bureau in London reported last month that General Eisenhower, Allied African commander, had sent Mihailovic a New Year's message expressing hope that he and his guerillas would enjoy continued successes against the Axis.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Fighting French leader, a week ago awarded the Croix de Guerre with Palms to Mihailovic.

Jap-Held Areas Warned Not To Obey Allies

By the Associated Press

Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo told a parliament budget committee in Tokyo yesterday that Japan would respect the independence of Occupied Thailand and French Indo-China, but at the same time he declared those countries "will be duly dealt with" should they show signs of acting "at the beck and call of the United States and Britain."

This combination of promises and threats was contained in a Tokyo broadcast recorded by the Associated Press. Tojo was replying to an interpellation by a House of Peers committee.

A broadcast recorded by the FCC also quoted Tojo as saying his Government would crack down on "peacetime industries" under a "strict policy" to which he would lend his "guidance." This was seen as another indication Tojo was demanding extensive personal power in an effort to boost Japanese war production.

Immediate Validity of No. 5 Fuel Oil Ration Coupon Urged

An "urgent suggestion" that period 5 fuel oil coupons be immediately validated was made last night by Lester Scott, director of the oil heating division, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, who reported hundreds of Washington homes "are without heat because they do not have currently valid coupons."

In a telegram to Joel Dean, OPA fuel rationing director, Scott said validating the coupons would relieve suffering and take the strain off local rationing boards which he said were swamped with thousands of emergency ration requests.

Dean, reached at his home by telephone, said he had not received the telegram. After it had been read to him the OPA official declined to make any statement.

Neither Robert K. Thompson, District OPA administrator, nor H. C. Moorman, District rationing officer, could be reached for comment. Both men, it was stated at their homes, were conferring with OPA regional officials from New York.

Curtis Steuart of L. P. Steuart & Bros., Inc., said there had been an increase in the past day or so in the number of orders placed for fuel oil, but attributed this partially to "panicky" customers alarmed by dwindling home storage supplies and the cold spell. How many of his calls came from persons actually without fuel oil he didn't know, but he guessed there "are quite a few homes" in that fix throughout the District.

Steuart said the trouble now was not in getting oil to the dealers—"I don't know a dealer in town who doesn't have oil"—but in delivering it to customers. Transportation facilities, labor shortages, and a lack, in some cases, of valid coupons, complicate the problem.

No. 3 coupons expired Tuesday, and No. 5 coupons do not became valid, unless Scott's request is heeded, until March 7. Persons who can show genuine need, however, can trade some of their No. 5 coupons at the local rationing boards for No. 4's. But this involves a lot of red tape, Steuart said, which hinders rather than helps the situation.

Meantime, the OPA announced it had forbidden use of fuel oil for pleasure boating in 17 Eastern States and the District. Gasoline already had been withdrawn for pleasure purposes.

Highway Transportation is the only way War Plants get a lot of materials on time—624 War Plant Managers tell you why—

HEADLINES from the front...newsreels...radio... all tell the same story—THIS IS A MOTORIZED WAR! Armies with the best motorized equipment are winning!

It's the same on the home front. Trucks are doing a magnificent job. With one-twentieth the carrying capacity of the rails, they're hauling one-quarter the load ...in less than half the time!

TRUCKS KEEP WAR PLANTS RUNNING

In an appeal to Washington authorities . . . in telegrams and letters . . . 624 war plant managers recently told why trucks are essential . . . why no other carrier can ever take over the job.*

You cannot hit maximum production schedules with cumbersome slow-moving freight that takes two or three times longer...and leaves plant managers guessing when supplies will be in.

Only trucks with their amazing delivery speed and accurate hourly scheduling can keep war plants operating at top efficiency.

War plant managers producing for the Army and Navy know it well. Yet there's legislation still on the books...new regulations proposed...that ham-string America's Trucking Companies.

LET'S GET RID OF INTERSTATE BARRIERS ONCE AND FOR ALL!

Efficient highway transportation demands elimination of conflicting state laws on sizes, lengths, and weights ...complete revision of the thousands of complicated state, county, and city taxes that raise little money but much confusion.

State legislatures are willing. A clear-cut demand from Washington is all that's required.

KILL 35 MPH FOR TRUCKS

Unwittingly a 35 mph limit has been set for pleasure cars and freight trucks alike... a regulation that defeats its very purpose—to save tires.

Truck tires—five times the size of your own—loaf while yours strain. Their most efficient speed is 5 to 10 mph faster. Moreover, slower truck speeds require more trucks on the job...more drivers and mechanics...more tire mileage.

EASE UP ON GAS, TIRES AND EQUIPMENT

Today war plants are crying for more and more deliveries...faster—faster—faster. That takes more motor trucks—old trucks kept on the job—new trucks and trailers to help carry the load. Yet America's trucking system has not been allowed to expand.

WITH 1/20 THE R.R. CAPACITY TRUCKS HAUL 1/4 THE LOAD— in less than half the time!

War Supplies Transported	From	To	TRUCK Delivery Time	RAIL Delivery Time

504 mi.	New Haven	Cleveland	38 hrs.	3-4 days

Our war effort needs this new equipment...new parts ...and the tires and gas to keep trucks rolling. The demands of our war plants must be met.

LET'S LICK HITLER THIS YEAR!

This need not be a "long war." We can get it over—quick! But it will take clear thinking on the part of your representatives in Washington. It will take full use of America's fastest transportation system...the greatest highway system in the world. It will take action—not next year—not next month—but today!

It will take full recognition—by everybody—that this is a MOTORIZED WAR!

Grown Up

Most settlements reach the status of cityhood via a long and sometimes arduous process of expansion; Hyattsville, Md., although it has grown rapidly, proposes to achieve the same end by legislation. A bill just introduced at Annapolis would strike "Mayor and Common Council" out of the law and substitute "Mayor and City Council."

Alert Plus

Most Washingtonians knew that it was no air-raid alarm but you just couldn't convince a rather officious air-raid warden of the fact. When the noon sirens sounded yesterday, the woman began directing pedestrians, including a policeman, to cover near Second and F Streets Northeast. A half hour later when it became clear there was no raid, the woman dissapeaerd.

Women Chart Makers Are WAHOS

Now it's the WAHOS and its members aren't Indians. That's the latest women's alphabetical organization to join the WAVES, WAACS, and the like. WAHOS is the unofficial name given the girls who make the nautical charts for the Navy in its hydrographic Office at nearby Suitland, Md. The girls decided to have themselves an organization with a catchy name even if it won't be recognized by the Navy. The mapmakers at the Coast and Geordetic Survey call themselves WHEMS, another unofficial group. WAHOS are the initials for Women's Auxiliary Hydrographic Office Service.

Meantime, the War Department has approved officially the wearing of bandanna hankerchiefs by its women ordnance workers. The bandanna are to be known as "WOW's." The department, in an official communique, says the "Ordnance Department insignia of a shell and flame shall be scattered or 'tossed about' on the 'WOW Bandanna' without following any regular arrangement. "The department specifies that the WOWS must be made of washable materials and other minute details. An Ordnance captain has been assigned to give out information on costs, styles, etc. The WOWS will be used around heads of women ordnance workers to keep their hair out of the machines. Some view them as the first step toward uniforms for civilian war workers.

The Bellamy committee has a tentative appointment today with President Roosevelt. It's ready to make its suggestions on a uniform draft plan to cover Federal workers. Meantime, War Manpower Commission has again listed the Federal Government as an "essential activity." This eases the way for the Government to give 3-B draft classifications to Federal workers who are family men and who are in essential or hard-to-replace jobs. Under no circumstances will employes in jobs listed as nonessential be given 3-B classifications in the Federal service. War Manpower has a list of nonessential jobs and they include elevator operators, chauffeurs and the like.

The story behind the listing of the Federal Government as an essential activity is a bit fantastic and it would be funny if it weren't so serious. War manpower first listed the Government as an essential activity. The President then abruptly cancelled all draft deferments in the Federal service and the Federal Government was taken off the essential list. Now the manpower committee on occupational deferments which is headed by Colis Stocking has again made the Government "essential." However, there is no list of essential occupations in the Federal service to properly carry out the manpower committee idea. This may be done eventually.

Senator Kilgore of West Virginia, is interested in simplification of the parts used in war materials and he has been pushing Army and Navy hard on it. The program properly executed, could save much material and labor. The West Virginian recently visited a captain in the Navy Department to find out how the program was progressing. The officer evaded questions for awhile. When Kilgore pressed his inquiry the officer is reported to have told him that he knew absolutely nothing of the progress, that he had recently replaced an officer in charge of the program, and that this officer took all the files and personnel working on the program to sea with him.

Agriculture Department is working out a swell scheme to take care of new employes. First, an attempt will be made to get rooms for the new people before they get here. Failing in that, the personnel office has arranged to place the people in the homes of old employes until they can get located. Lois Monie is in charge of the program. Meantime, Agriculture is working out a direct recruiting plan which is expected to get the approval of Civil Service. Agriculture has a vast field organization that covers every county in the Nation. This organization soon will undertake the job of helping supply the department here with stenographers and typists.

Contrary to reports, the Office of the Public Printer has no plans for raising the hourly rates of the approximately 6000 Government Printing Office employes. Employes recently were placed on a 48-hour week and now the average weekly paycheck of a day printer is $68.60, and $76.80 for night workers. This wage, officials say, is greater than the comparable rate paid in private industry here. Moreover, G. P. O. employes get 26 days annual leave and 15 days sick leave. The extension of the work week increased by 30 per cent the average employe's paycheck. Meantime, the employes have appealed to Congress for an increased hourly rate. Public Printer Giegengack has agreed to negotiate with the employes if the congressional appeal is withdrawn. . . . A Civil Service exam for District policemen has been announced.

Church Leaders Plan Visit To Camp Lee

A "team" of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish religious leaders will visit Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va., in the coming week to interpret American citizens' common war objectives and postwar hopes.

Their stay from Monday to Wednesday will launch the Southern area phase of the camps program of the National Conference of Christian and Jews. The program originally scheduled for today at the Richmond Air Base has been postponed indefinitely.

Speakers at Camp Lee will include Dr. Guthrie Speers, pastor of Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, Md.; Rabbi Milton Steinberg, spiritual leader of New York's Park Avenue Synagogue, and the Rev. Edward L. Stephens, pastor of Richmond's Sacred Heart Cathotic Church. "Team" leader will be Dr. Beverley Boyd, on leave of absence as rector of Grace and Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, Richmond, to serve as assistant to Dr. Andrew R. Gottschall, of this city, director of the conference's camps program. Dr. Gottschall heads the conference's Southern area, with headquarters in Washington.

Subsequent programs for Fort Belvoir, Fort Meade and other nearby camps will be announced within the next few days, according to Dr. Gottschall, who has just returned here after supervising the conference's camps programs in all parts of America.

Capt. Cassin Young Won Navy Cross In Solomons

Capt. Cassin Young, 48, a native of Washington who lost his life in the Battle of the Solomons last November 13, has been awarded the Navy Cross for "extraordinary heroism" in that engagement.

Previously Captain Young had received the Congressional Medal of Honor for heroism during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Captain Young was killed in the same action which claimed the life of Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, former Naval Aide to President Roosevelt, whose flagship he commanded in the Solomons. His widow, Mrs. Eleanor M. Young, lives in Coronado, Calif.

The citation with his award stated that Captain Young's "daring and determination contributed materially to the victory which prevented the enemy from accomplishing their purposes."

The association also adopted a resolution approving the school board budget and asked that the Capital Transit Co. distribute its buses over areas where they are needed most during the rush hours.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, spoke on "Keeping Mentally Healthy."

Evangelism Urged As Needed Policy At Lenten Project

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Warning that "the church must evangelize or die," Dr. Jesse M. Bader yesterday challenged religious leaders to meet their spiritual responsibility toward wartime Washington, especially its newcomers.

Evangelism is not the only business of the church, but it is its first business—an imperative upon us in war or peace, depression or prosperity," reminded Dr. Bader, director of the evangelism department, Federal Council of Churches, New York City.

Dr. Bader, who "generaled" the famous National Christian Mission in 1940-'41, spoke at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, at a meeting heralding a city-wide Lenten project—"Our Capital for Christ." It is being sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches, central agency of 175 Protestant churches and allied agencies.

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Federation of Churches' executive secretary, outlined plans for the project, expressing hope that full support would come from the city's legislative, religious, civic, educational and governmental leaders.

Dr. Robin Gould, chairman of the federation's evangelism committee, presided, and Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, led devotions. Dr. Robert Brooks, pastor of Lincoln Congregational Church, offered the invocation at the luncheon in the church educational building. Dr. John W. Rustin was host pastor.

Lent begins March 10, Ash Wednesday. Easter is April 25.

Red Cross Hopes For Record Month On Blood Giving

Yesterday's near-400 was the closest to the record number of donors set last Friday, when more than 500 persons donated pints of blood, to exceed the daily quota.

If the 300 or better daily average continues, the center will better the 6800 mark of November.

Officials said, however, that the figures, while encouraging, brought no occasion for rejoicing, for the District must increase the daily turnover to 500 pints a day to meet the demands of the services.

War Workers' Servicemen's Clubs to Open

The War Hospitality Committee last night voted to make available, through Lanham Act funds, a building at 2122 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, for conversion into an an Allied Nations junior officers club, and at the same time announced that a four-story brick USO club at Eighth Street and Market Place Northwest would be opened early in April under the direction of the Salvation Army.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill, prominent in Washington society and club work, reported that Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, had requested the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, to arrange for having a large rally, or a series of rallies, to awaken the people "to the fact that we are at war." Bishop Freeman, Mrs. Atwill said, had in turn asked her to organize her friends and club workers to the task.

Also given sanction was the use of a building at 924 New York Avenue for servicemen and warworkers. Further study will be given the subject, however, before action is taken to secure the building for community purposes.

Mable Cook, of Recreation Services, Inc., has been named director of a program for the training of persons working in clubs and recreation centers used by war workers and men in uniform. The volunteers will receive pointers as to proper conduct and the layout of Washington and other relative matters.

Joseph McGarraghy, local attorney, was appointed vice chairman of the War Hospitality Committee, and vice president of Recreation Services, Inc., to succeed Lieut. Comdr. William Corley, who has resigned because of ill health. The meeting was held in the Labor Department cafeteria.

Car Registry Drops 19.7% In District

South Carolina Is Only State Showing Increase; Truck Decline Is Small

There were 17.9 per cent fewer cars registered in the District in 1942 than there were in 1941 and the District is leading the Nation in the percentage loss of passenger cars, the National Association of Automobile Dealers announced yesterday.

The District's 178,137 pasenger cars of 1941 dwindled to 140,626 in the course of a year—a loss of 36,511. There was a slight drop in the number of trucks, which decreased from 17,186 to 17,174.

On the basis of a survey made in 36 States and the District of Columbia, there were at the end of 1942, 28,553,945 passenger cars and 4,378,780 trucks in service in the country—a total of 32,932,725 vehicles. These figures compare with 30,312,120 passenger cars and 4,571,230 trucks under registration at the end of 1941, a total of 34,883,350. Thus the approximate number of vehicles going out of service for the 12-month period was 1,950,625. Of this loss, 1,758,175 were passenger cars and 192,450 were trucks.

Wisconsin was second to the District in the loss of passenger cars, with a 14.8 per cent decline, and Montana was third, losing 12.6 per cent. South Carolina showed the only important gain in the number of cars, with a 9.3 per cent increase.

Blalock Given 15 Years for Bank Robbery

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 17.—Gordon Blalock of Washington, accused of participating in a Hyattsville bank robbery September 25, 1941, pleaded guilty to the charge today in Federal Court and was sentenced by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut to serve 15 years in prison and pay a $1000 fine.

Blalock is the fourth person to be convicted in connection with the $52,000 robbery of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. The other three, Hilliard Sanders, William Leo Keefe and Jack Ray, were given long prison sentences previously.

Was Tip-Off Man

The 48-year-old Washingtonian admitted that he served as "tip-off" man in the robbery, sitting in a parked automobile near the bank and giving the other accomplices a signal when bank messengers from whom the money was taken left the bank and drove off.

Blalock said he received $6000 as his share from the hold-up.

T. Barton Harrington, the Government prosecutor, told the court that Blalock, a native of Arkansas, had been sentenced in 1922 to serve 25 years for participating in a mail truck robbery in Oklahoma. He added that Blalock was released in 1931 and had been granted a presidential pardon in 1937.

Tried Straight and Narrow

Blalock told the court that after his release in 1931 he entered the automobile sales business in Washington and tried to "go straight." He said he received frequent visits from men he had met while in prison and they finally induced him to return to crime.

Blalock was first arrested in connection with the bank robbery last October 19, but was released a week later. He was arrested again last week by the Federal Bureau of Investigation near Laurel, Md., where he was employed as a timekeeper with a construction company.

Human Alarm Clock Awakens Sleepyhead Warworkers

Job She Invented Keeps Washington Woman Jumping

MRS. ROY HALL

The war has transformed Mrs. Roy Hall into a woman who bounds from bed 14 times a morning when only last week she wouldn't think twice about getting up more than once a day. For Mrs. Hall of 1919 Nineteenth Street Northwest now runs a human alarm clock service for 14 working people.

Said Mrs. Hall, "I thought how important it was to have people, particularly Government workers, get to work on time, and so I decided to give this service, for $2 per month, or 50 cents each week."

Having decided to help those who depend on their neighbors' caroling and their own automatism to leap from bed in the morning, as the custom is, Mrs. Hall inserted an ad in The Post telling "all sleepyheads" that their problems were no more.

A Washington resident since 1935 and a profound disbeliever in the worth of our weather, Mrs. Hall has not, she somewhat sharply asserted, developed a case of quivering jitters since she started ringing.

The magic words said between 3 a. m. and 8 a. m. are direct and undisturbing: Good morning, Mrs. Quisby. It is 3:49 and time to get up. Mrs. Hall said she did not say anything about things being well or unwell. Not one of her customers cares especially about extending the conversation, some of them say thank you, but no more.

And what does the telephone company think of it? It has done no powerful thinking or deciding about the matter, and, it reported, probably will let things go along as they are.

Victory Sidelights

2½ Million Bandages Is Goal Of D. C. Red Cross for March 15

Nearly two and a half million surgical dressings — more than twice the number that has been shipped from the District since last August—must be made by the District Red Cross surgical dressings unit by March 15.

Mrs. Brown Harbold, chairman, said: "I have received a telegram from the Red Cross Eastern area stating that our present shipments were not meeting the needs of the Army and asking us to speed up production of all materials on hand. The need for surgical dressings is so urgent that we have been asked to delay pads and packs until the other dressings are completed."

With Jacques Shepard, 16, 3605 Norton Place Northwest, he mixed several chemicals, put them into a glass jar with a metal lid. They left Jacques' basement laboratory and John was holding the jar when it exploded at Thirty-sixth and Ordway Streets.

Taken to Emergency Hospital, John was admitted for a mangled right hand, thumb, forefinger, index and ring finger and powder burns on both legs. The hospital said his condition was serious and that a transfusion was made shortly before midnight after it had been necessary to amputate part of his hand.

It also urged appointment of a people's counsel for the District, and asked for the continuation of express buses in the Petworth area.

ON THE HOME FRONT

By Martha Ellyn

The pattern of our national life is changing with great rapidity. Many of the orders issued by the Government reflect themselves in the household.

The following is a summary of recent Government orders which will be of interest to women:

FOOD AND BEVERAGES

Price Increase: Due to higher production costs, Office of Price Administration is allowing stores to pass on to customers price increases on the following foods: Canned chile con carne, shoestring and julienne potatoes, pretzels, canned prune juice and all canned dried prune products, canned chicken and noodle dinner, canned chicken a la king and canned homestyle chicken.

Maple Syrup: Householders who buy maple syrup direct from the packer will probably find ceiling prices approximately 6 cents a pound, due to a recent order by Office of Price Administration. Ceilings in grocery stores will be slightly higher.

Wines: Price increases from 1 to 20 cents a bottle, depending on the size of bottle and type of wine, have been allowed by Office of Price Administration on fruit, berry and certain grape wines because of higher manufacturing costs.

Ice: Local shortages of ice should be substantially reduced by a recent action of Office of Price Administration. Local offices of this agency have been authorized to make any price adjustments necessary to control shortages.

HOUSEHOLD EQUIPMENT

Cutlery: Regular slicing knives, with well-sharpened edges, are available for un-cut bread. While they have not been prohibited, scalloped-edge bread knives may be hard to find.

Clothes Wringers: Hand clothes wringers, previously prohibited by WPB, may now be made in limited quantities and with small amounts of metal.

Heating Stoves: Residents outside of fuel rationing areas who need new coal or oil heating stoves but are prevented from obtaining them because of existing restrictions, may file an appeal to the Plumbing and Heating Division, War Production Board, Washington, D. C.

Oil Rations: War workers living in trailers heated by oil-burning stoves have had their oil ration increased by Office of Price Administration in order to safeguard their health.

Coal stoves — Rationed coal stoves have been made available by the Office of Price Administration to families whose present fuel oil ration is insufficient. Applicants for these stoves must pledge themselves to install them at once and use them to their full capacity.

Gas conservation—Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, has appealed to residential users of natural and mixed gas in western and southern New York to reduce their gas consumption 5 p2er cent during the next 10 weeks. A shortage in these areas threatens the work of war production.

MISCELLANEOUS

Textiles: Approximately one billion yards of fabrics have been saved through WPB conservation orders plus voluntary simplification of design.

Hosiery salvage: Since the beginning of the WPB hosiery salvage drive, November 15, about 7,500,000 pairs of stockings have been received. Those turned in between the middle of December and middle of January alone, will make more than 150,000 powder bags.

Printed fabrics: Restrictions by WPB on the use of copper for rollers to make prints will result in smaller variety and fewer new patterns. About 60 per cent of the present rollers will remain in production. The others will supply about 10 million pounds of copper for war.

Dyes: Textiles, leather, paper, paint, ink, lacquer, plastics, rubber and other products will in some degree be affected by far-reaching WPB controls over dyes and organic pigments. Bright and dark shades will be fewer. By this order about 55 million pounds of dyes and the raw materials which go into them will be available for war.

Men's Increasing Employment of Women Workers Introduces Element of 'Sex' Into Business World That Is Serious Threat to Home Life, Says Wife

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Having read the letter signed "Pat" in Monday's column, in which a wife tells of her quiet, intellectual 44-year-old husband's attentions to his 21-year-old secretary, I am moved to write to you on the subject of office relationships between men and women in general. I really believe this is the most challenging subject in this country today, next to winning the war. Because I feel this so strongly, I hesitate to put my thoughts into words, for fear I may not be able to express myself adequately.

Even though we win this war, our whole civilization depends on maintaining the dignity and sanctity of home life. Yet sometimes I wonder if there can be good home life and real happiness so long as men and women work together in close proximity in the business world, particularly in the present "boss-secretary" set-up. I admit I am not qualified to make suggestions of other and better ways to run business, although I am sure such means xist. The "boss-secretary" set-up is unwholesome and a menace to home life for the following reasons:

It is impossible for a man and woman to work together approximately nine hours a day, six days a week, without forming some attachment. Chances are the secretary is young, which always intrigues a middle-aged man. And he is in the rather exciting position of giving her instructions and having her wait on him. Then, too, business girls are carefully schooled nowadays on how to be well-groomed and glamorous, so that the secretary's appearance and manner are always pleasing, and the boss never sees her under other conditions. If she happens to be of a predatory nature, with loose morals, the situation is truly dangerous, no matter how commonplace she may be, by intelligent standards. I believe there are very few cases of the boss actually falling in love with his secretary, because for real refinement and charm, the average business girl cannot compare with the average home woman. Also, most men with good wives do not want to become involved in anything that will disturb their home life, so they do not allow their thoughts to dwell on "love" during office hours. However, there is the girl in his direct line of vision, nine hours a day—"my girl," as he usually calls her. And what's to be done about it?

Would Segregate Sexes, 'For Everybody's Good'

I believe for the good of everybody that women must return to the home or enter professions for which they are specially suited, and let men run business by themselves, without female distractions. Until that occurs, everything should be done to keep "sex" in the office down to a minimum. Surely anything that tends to make such relationships less impersonal and more intimate is a mistake. I refer especially to the type of party "Pat" writes about, namely, office parties with liquor and dancing, at downtown hotels, to which wives are not invited. My husband's division also gave a Christmas party in a private auditoriun. at a local hotel, with dinner, drinking and dancing—after which the girls had to be taken home. Office parties of this type seem to be customary in Washington and I know of two cases in which they marked the beginning of flirtations which led to "affairs" between a man and a woman coworker.

My husband says he does not enjoy these parties, but feels that he should go. I don't understand why. He is a strong-minded man and has always been independent of other people's opinions in general. I feel a social get-together of office workers after hours, at Christmas time, with an exchange of gifts and light refreshments (preferably non-alcoholic) would be all right. But even so, I cannot understand how social mingling helps to promote efficiency; and we all know that when liquor is flowing freely, inhibitions are relaxed and anything can happen. My husband and I are so devoted and well-suited to each other that I know neither he nor I could ever fall in love with anyone else. But I live in dreadful fear that an "affair" could be possible, now that drinking and fraternizing is the accepted practice among men and women who work together. If that should happen, life would be over for me . . .

Do you think I should accept these conditions more casually? And not be so "unsophisticated," as I am accused of being? What is your opinion of men and women coworkers mixing socially, when wives are not invited? Particularly when there is a lot of drinking? I shall watch the paper for your answers to my questions; and I know many other wives will be grateful for your ideas, too. I realize it is foolish to anticipate trouble (even though I keep it to myself); but none can deny that home life is endangered today principally because of "sex" in business.

HOMEMAKER.

Type of Party Described Is Peculiar Innovation

DEAR HOMEMAKER; In my opinion, an office party of the kind you mention, with wives excluded while men and women coworkers get together to dine, dance and carouse, is an exceedingly vulgar performance, which as you say, could not possibly contribute to departmental efficiency over the long haul; but would, rather, have an insidious effect to the contrary. It is interesting that both you and "Pat" speak of such parties having been given by your respective husbands' "divisions." From this, we may infer that this particular type of party is the peculiar innovation of Government personnel—since in my considerable experience in the business world, both in Washington and other parts of the country, I have never previously encountered such "goings-on" under the respectable guise of customary social usage.

As for your uneasy feeling that "home life is endangered today principally because of 'sex' in business"—I believe you are tilting with a grossly exaggerated estimate of the "sex" element in routine office association between men and women. The element of personal awareness is far less pronounced and less easily provoked in this field, during working hours, than at any purely social function where the sexes fraternize. You must understand that with a few sordid exceptions, women (or girls) in business hold their jobs on productive merit and not by glamour appeal to erotically vulnerable bosses; which means that during office hours they are primarily engrossed in doing work that will (1) measure up to the prevailing standard of efficiency; and (2) "hold the line" against lively competitive effort to displace or surpass them. And while it has long been the custom for women in business to put their best foot forward, in manner and grooming, it is (in the main) without thought or simpering implication of trying to "wow" the male sex, but rather a matter-of-fact concession to the indisputable value, in competitive endeavor, of looking "successful" and behaving agreeably—a feasible practice which you will find businessmen of intelligence observing as punctiliously (for its effect upon other men) as the average woman worker.

Season in Business Should Ease Wife's Mind

I have sometimes wondered if the vague uneasiness and envy (frequently camouflaged as condescension) with which the sheltered home-staying woman tends to regard her office-working sister, in her wage-earning association with men, could stem from her artless imputation to the "working girl" of the same dependent-type attitude toward men which underlies and emotionally colorates her dealings with men—or, at least, her dealings with the man she has married, who represents her bread-and-butter as well as her psychic and social anchorage in life. It has been said that no man is a hero to his valet; and the average business woman's close-up knowledge of "men at work," combined with the intrinsic independence of character which launched her on a self-supporting course, is not exactly conducive of a dangerously personal interest in them. And I believe that if all wives had been through the mill of office work experience before marriage, they would realize: (1), that it is efficiency-plus on the job, enhanced by a pleasantly cooperative personality, which compels the average man's admiration for a woman coworker; and (2), that they need have no fear of home-wrecking rivalry on the office front so long as they (the wives) give an equally competent and gracious performance in the domestic department of the man's life. In other words, then, as I see it—the way to eliminate your kind of worry is for more women (not less) to get instructive first-hand acquaintanceship with men as coworkers in fields outside the home.

Recanning From Tin Into Glass Dangerous

Housewives were warned today by the Department of Agriculture that transferring commercially canned foods into glass jars is a dangerous practice that may result in fatal food poisoning.

Dr. Russell M. Wilder, physician and nutritionist who is chief of the civilian food requirements branch of the Food Distribution Administration, cautioned consumers that poisoning may result from eating foods that have been recanned at home.

He said that reports indicate that some housewives are buying commercially canned products in quantity—or using stocks already on hand—opening the cans and putting the contents into glass jars. Home canned foods do not have to be reported when Ration Book No. 2 is obtained and some hoarders are reported to be taking this means of misrepresenting commercially canned products.

"Most foods that are removed from cans must be reprocessed before they can be preserved in glass jars, just as if they had never been canned," Dr. Wilder explained. "Reprocessing, however, is unsatisfactory for housewives to undertake, and may be dangerous. Not only does the product become a soupy mass with decreased food value, but it may be unsafe to eat.

A Thoroughbred

By Jeanne Contini

Hold on to your hat, Miss Brown, here we go again. This time it has to do with a classic that is really worth shouting about. For a relatively small pile of pennies, here is a dress with sterling qualities. It has that pressed and brushed look which is indispensable in an office. It's warm. It's comfortable to work in. It's attractive, and as easy to wear as a pleasantly dog-eared tweed.

The fabric is pure wool flannel, especially heart-warming in liberty red or beige. The seams are wide, the hem is worthy of the name, and the placket is zipped. The material is cut true to the grain, which has nothing to do with fidelity, but does mean that the pattern was put on carefully matched. This means that the shoulders fit, the sleeves don't twist, and the skirt falls properly . . . all properties taken for granted when right, but painfully obvious when wrong.

The neckline is convertible. Come spring, we suggest you try a flawless white pique gilet or collar. We might mention that the braided belt is honest-to-goodness English leather.

According to the conversations we've held with consultants in Government offices, we gather that this is the kind of dress they'd like to see in triplicate.

Thirteen dollars will buy it, and if you will call NAtional 4200, Extension 324, we will be glad to tell you where.

SHOP AND RUN

'Make It Do'

By Marianne

The silks, cottons and woolens that used to color the Easter parade are now marching in the parade of uniforms. With more fabric needed for military use, less can be converted into surplus civilian needs. However, instead of grabbing up helter-skelter a lot of clothes that may make us very unhappy later, let's take the best of care of those we have—there's long life in them yet.

Taking care of those we have is no simple matter, either, especially with cleaning and pressing problems that are ever with us. There's much justification in the exchange of complaints that are aired at the dinner table, but we should remember that manpower transportation and material shortages are tremendous problems for the people who give us these services. Some places, it's true, are using the war as an additional excuse for shockingly poor work, but now the days of costly experimenting are over, and you'll appreciate the value of the name of a good dry cleaner for your Address Book

Every garment in your closest has its own peculiarities and should receive individual attention. We know where this is being done, even in Washington!

Besides individual care and hand finishing for each garment they also make minor repairs that never seem to get done otherwise. Also included in the original charge is a special spotting service which actually removes difficult stains from your clothing (a small charge is made for removing paint stains).

Do you have a raincoat that's fine when the sun is shining, but is allergic to water? At the same time that you have yours cleaned and refinished, they'll waterproof it for you. Total cost of $1.50 for a plain raincoat.

We all like to shine in our own conversation, or on the dance floor, but when the shine is on our skirts or trousers then it's time to go on a "sit-down strike" and do something about it. Although they don't promise to remove the shine, they do things to it with steam and moisture that improve the fabric and raises the nap. One consolation is that you can depend upon your suit not coming back with a brand new shine it acquired under the pressing machine, as happened to a suit we know of!

And then there's the story of the sweater that was size 36 before dunked in water, but came out a mysterious 32! You can take these perfectly good sweaters or other knitted garments and have them reblocked to just the size you want. Sometimes if the garment has been subjected to too severe treatment, it isn't possible for them to reshape it. If in doubt, its a good idea to attach a note to the sweater asking to be informed of the advisability of reblocking it.

Make a note to:—

Fix up a kit of stain removal supplies to supplement trips to the cleaners. It should contain absorbent powders, such as talcolm powder or cornstarch; a bleach, such as hydrogen peroxide, and a grease solvent such as carbon tetrachloride.

If there's a spot on the garment, attach a slip telling what kind it is.

Send garments to the cleaners before storing as dry cleaning destroys eggs and larve of moths.

Give some first aid to woolens, corduroys, velevt and velveteens between visits to the cleaners by steaming over a hot tub.

Wools shouldn't be cleaned too often as cleaning dries some of the essential oils in fabrics.

Don't use polish remover nail polish stain on garments, as you may ruin them. Ordinarily the spot can be removed by a dry cleaner.

Please call NAtional 4200, Extension 324 between 9 and 5:30 for your address book information.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

What kind of person are you: High-powered and tense? Soft and lazy? Or are you one of those "middle-of-the-roaders"? Whatever your temperament, choose your exercise program accordingly. It will work out better for you that way.

Here is a relaxer for the knots in the neck and shoulders:

Lie on your back on the floor with legs straight down, arms straight up in air from the shoulders. Reach the right hand up in air as high as you can get it and raise the right shoulder clear off the floor. Hold for a second, lower. Then do the same with the left arm. Repeat six times and relax.

Get down on your knees and sit back on your heels, back straight, arms down and hands clasped in back. Keep your back straight and your chin up and bend slowly forward until your chin almost touched the floor. Come upright again and relax.

For the "middle of the roader," the most important thing is to take the time to exercise every day. Both type of exercise are good—provided you take them!

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

A Call for Snobs

Why not some social snobbery on the moral front as a means of checking hoarders and cheats? This was tried during the Revolutionary War and also the Civil War when the accusation "hoarder" became a fighting word.

Social snobbery is a weapon women can wield effectively and which they may now exercise, paradoxical as it may seem, in the interest of democracy. Even the forces of law cannot completely run down black markets or violators of rationing decrees. But public opinion can blacklist those who patronize such markets and can turn its social scorn on those who hide and hoard and cheat.

Social Scorn
A Potent Weapon

Mass social disapproval in one form or another has had to be called into play by human beings in every effort they have made to live together in a democratic way—that is, with equal rights for all. At Jamestown and Plymouth, in the settlement of the prairie and the wilderness and in other places and times of stress and challenge in America, the community has had to outlaw those who didn't play the game fair. We now face another time of testing in this country. Our supply of food and clothing is decreasing. Black markets are arising and the selfish and undisciplined are grabbing. Ugly and primitive forces are making themselves felt.

Law alone cannot cope with these forces. We must sustain it by public scorn of all devious dealings and by social ostracism of those who practice them. We cannot weaken and condone petty infractions of our code for distribution on the ground that "it's just human nature." We need a righteous Old Testament wrath on our attitude toward all who trick and defraud. What then specifically can we do?

We can state our stand definitely and boldly in the presence of those who boast of "laying in" a little of this or a little of that which is getting scarce or about to be rationed.

No Condoning Of Hidden Cans

We can refuse to accept silently a neighbor's or a friend's easy statement that "nobody's going to declare her full allotment of canned goods."

We can refuse like Queen Victoria, to be amused when someone relates tales of her cleverness in getting this or that thing which is scarce.

We can refuse to eat a steak or anything else that our host or hostess whispers was obtained by any devious or secret method.

We can send our regrets to any host or hostess who is suspected of hoarding or of buying food by other than regular channels—and we can fail to include such host or hostess in our future invitations.

We can give the icy stare of appraisal rather than the warm one of admiration to those of our acquaintances who parade in sudden and luxuriant apparel of which they have no special need.

We can fail to register envy or enthusiasm or even much respect toward the woman who boasts of the number of pairs of nylon stockings she hasn't "even worn yet."

Should High-Hat Gas Hoarders

We can refuse to accept motor rides from persons whom we have any reason to believe are using their cars for pleasure driving or are using gasoline to which they are not entitled.

We can register only contemptuous pity for the little human being who boasts smugly that he or she has "enough of everything" for the duration.

We can drop from our list of acquaintances the expansive fellow who boasts that he can get something for us that is on a rationed list.

We can make it our business to have nothing to do socially with any person whom we have reason to believe patronizes a black market.

However small our social weight in this world may be, we can in the interest of our own self-respect thoroughly revise our list of friends and blot out completely from our thought and our regard all those who at this time haven't the courage and the honor to stand or fall on the home front in support of the democratic and civilized way of life we are seeking to preserve.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When is the proper time to introduce the baby to the playpen? Obviously, a long time before he will need it for any real confinement of his activities.

If he gets used to lying around on the floor and moving wherever his fancy dictates, he is going to be a much abused baby if he is then put into a pen. But if from inactive infancy, he becomes accustomed to lying on the soft pad of the pen with the uprights between him and liberty, that too, will seem to be the natural way to play.

The advantages of a pen are innumerable. In the pen the baby has his own playthings. He has the opportunity to move about with handy rods to which to cling and which will inspire him to pull hard and sit up straight or get up on his wobbly legs.

Some time in each day he ought to be taken out of the pen and given the run of the house. He needs that to increase his knowledge of his environment and to discover the things he cannot do as well as the things he can do with his mother's gracious permission.

A mother who has the sole care of her baby needs to have some safe place in which she can stow him while she does the work which may take her attention from him. Any mother who has to keep pushing the child out from under her feet, or picking him out of the danger spots in which he is sure to get, becomes a very ill-tempered mother. For her own sake, as well as the baby's, she should investigate a playpen. It's almost as essential as a bed.

Mr. A. F. H. explains that his boy is now past the playpen age. (They do get to an age when pens will not be a protection). But he still uses it.

"We have a one-register heating plant and the baby couldn't be kept away from this portion of the room. So now we use the pen as a sort of fence to keep the baby from running near or over the register. The baby, then, has the run of the house, except for that fenced-off corner."

This may suggest to other mothers ways in which the pen can be continued in its usefulness. There are always bookshelves, or fragile ornaments or even lamps which we would well prevent the baby handling. The pen, solidly established, may keep curious little hands away from objects which could be broken. But up to about 18 months or more, most children can spend most of their waking hours, indoors or out, in the handy playpen.

CHAPTER VII

Judith was surprised. He had always seemed so dignified, so serious over the business of learning to fly. He had never once been personal, and now he had called her Judith!

"No—really, I'm awfully proud of you, Hugh. You're my star pupil," she said lightly, trying to change the subject.

They seated themselves in the cockpit and adjusted the safety belts. A mechanic spun the prop and they were off down the runway. Hugh was using the controls in the student's seat. Judith relaxed. She wasn't afraid of Hugh's flying.

They were up half an hour and came down. Hugh held out his hand after he had jumped to the ground. Judith was not accustomed to being helped from the trainer plane. But she put out her hand willingly.

Hugh stood there looking down upon it. He laughed softly and turned it over. "When I think that this small hand can pilot a plane better than many men I am astonished. Women's hands have always intrigued me."

It was amazing coming from Hugh. Judith felt the hot blood rising in her cheeks and knew that she was blushing under Hugh's searching glance. She stood up and stepped out. Hugh lifted her down and she felt very feminine. There was strength and reassurance in the feel of his arms.

Hugh stood there a moment and then said, "Judith, I've been so terribly lonely. What do you do in the evenings? Is it too presumptuous of me to ask to come and see you?"

She said, "Why, not at all, I'll be glad for you to come out. My brother Jack would like to meet you. Maybe you'd enjoy seeing his lab. He's usually involved in some interesting experiments." She saw Jinx leaving the barracks then, and was anxious to have a word with him. But he seemed in a great hurry and was trailed by a student. He was not looking Judith's way, and she saw him getting into his car.

Hugh pressed his point, "Are you doing anything tonight?"

"I thought so, but I'm not sure," said Judith, tears hot behind her eyelids. Of course she knew that Jinx was disturbed over Cherry's accident, but she was hurt by his inattentiveness.

"May I call you about 7, then? And if you're not busy, I'll be out."

She nodded, but her thoughts were far from his words. Jinx's car was already headed toward town.

Johnny came out of the office. "Guess we'll have to take turns on Jinx's students this morning, if you will, Judy."

"All right, I have two more, though, myself."

Johnny's lips were tightly drawn in a firm line. Johnny was not pleased that Jinx had felt he must go to the hospital to see Cherry this morning. Their primary course must be finished within the time limit, for the major was getting ready to start an advanced course if the C. P. T. P. courses went off well this summer.

She forgot about Hugh until she saw him start toward his ancient relic parked near her own. He glanced back and she waved at him. Hugh was going to make a great pilot and she was pleased with her part in training him for the Army.

"I'll take Bob up for spirals and spins now, Judy. Keep an ear on the telephone when you're around, will you? But get one of the boys to listen when you take your next student," Johnny said as he stood waiting for Bob Brenson.

This makeshift was going to be hard on all of them until Cherry could come back to the office. It would be more difficult to break in a new stenographer than it would be worth. She would carry on for Cherry all that she could. That meant that she would have to make out the daily reports, too.

She went to the office and entered Hugh's time in his log book. She smiled at his progress. He was remarkable.

Dorne Stells sauntered in presently and said, "Hi, Judy! Where's everybody today? Miss Mason going to be all right? What was she doing out on the river road by herself?" He ran his questions together, not giving her time to answer the first.

Women's Club News

What with transportation difficulties, fuel and food rationing, the House of Mercy's six annual phantom dinners continuing through the month of February should be a welcome event.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

In fact, the only expense involved is $2, the price of the dinner. But if you feel more liberal-minded, certainly a larger donation won't be spurned. Checks should be made payable to the House of Mercy and sent to the chairman, Mrs. James M. Green, 1737 Massachusetts Avenue.

But what is this House of Mercy? Well, it is a home where young unmarried mothers receive physical and spiritual care for themselves and their babies. Moreover, during their stay there the girls are trained in various domestic sciences and other types of work, so that when they are ready to go out into the world again they can be self-supporting and able to take care of their children.

Present head of the home is Deaconess Lillian M. Yeo, who has been in charge for the past 41 years. The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, is president of the board of trustees.

A number of old Washington residents are on the board of lady managers, which has arranged the Phantom dinner. President of the board is Mrs. Harry L. Grant.

Are You Isolationist?

Do you harbor isolationist tendencies or thoughts? Or don't you know? Well, there's a surefire way to find out about your self. It's a quiz game, "Am I an Isolationist?" introduced this week across the country by the National League of Women Voters. A 10-point test of the true-false variety, it is expected to set off a barrage of discussion over the position the United States should assume toward other countries now and after the war.

Statements upon which players register and grade their opinions deal with reasons for the war, extent of armaments, trade relations, attitude toward allies and postwar organization to maintain peace.

The league sums up its position thusly: "If you made less than 100, you haven't passed, according to the rules of this game. If you made 100 (there are 10 questions in the complete quiz), "you recognize the tragic, mistaken thinking that paved the way for the present war and will produce another unless it is corrected . . . You realize that the freedom and security of the United States are vitally affected by the fate of the other peoples of the world . . . You are aware that freer exchange of goods between nations is indispensable in a reconstructed world, because trade is the life blood of production and employment."

In case you are interested in the complete quiz, a copy may be obtained from the National League of Women Voters, 726 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C.

About the Milk Price

Members of the Housekeepers' Alliance meeting Tuesday at the home of the president, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, passed a resolution approving a rise in cost of milk. But here's the text of the resolution:

"Whereas, food is the first essential necessity of the Nation both at home and abroad, and any influence tending to reduce its quantity or quality is to be deprecated; And whereas, the Housekeepers' Alliance is a group of homemakers who understand and have studied for years the reason for the basic cost of food and realize that the cost of producing and marketing food has gone up due to the impact of the war, Therefore, be it resolved, That we the members of the Housekeepers' Alliance . . . protest the effort to freeze the price of fluid milk and approve the effort on the part of fluid milk producers to secure for themselves a sufficient price to cover their costs and make sufficient profit to carry on the production of this essential food."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn

♡ A 7
◇ A Q J 6
♣ J 9 7 2

The bidding went:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

"I was defeated one trick at three no trump," he writes, "but I could have made it with more careful play. Four spades, however, could have been made without much trouble. Aware of this fact, unfortunately, my partner criticized my two-no-trump response. Do you agree with him?"

We would prefer a two-diamond reply by South, instead of two no trump, as he can't be sure that no trump is the best contract and the two-diamond call allows a cheaper response. With his shortness in hearts and neutral spade support, it may be considerably better to play the hand at spades if South can rebid that suit.

North is expected to bid over the two-diamond response. If he rebids the spades, South will raise to game; if the rebid is two no trump, South then may bid three no trump.

Lady Marines Make It Tough For Punsters

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Nineteen thousand women in uniform without a nickname to their names is making the repartee problem a tough one for the boys around Post Square.

You just can't have any sport, they claim, with thinking up puns for the Marine Corps women's reserve. Pronouncing MCWR sounds as if the cat got caught in a revolving door—a far cry from the euphonious titles of WAACS, WAVES and SPARS.

Those "usually reliable sources" that haunt the byways of the Nation's Capital confide that the idea of a nickname wasn't given up without a struggle. The powers-that-be toyed with the idea of MARS, muttered dubiously over WAMS, juggled between Marinettes and just playing it straight.

Reasons for no trick t'tle: After all, the feminine Marines are not auxiliaries. They are a bonafide part of the Marine Corps, complete with uniforms, pay and many duties identical with those of their masculine compatriots. And besides, all the nicknames they could concoct seemed farfetched—so today the ladies in olive green stand alone as the only uninitialed outfit of its kind in existence.

Even the civilian world has become involved in an alphabet soup maze. The WOWS—Women Ordnance Workers for the War Department. The WAAFS—Women's Air Ferrying Squadron. The WEMS—mapmakers at the Coast and Geodetic Survey. The WIRES—women in radio electric service. To say nothing of the WAHOS (unofficial)—Women's Auxiliary Hydrographic Office Service, in Suitland, Md.

The boys around Post Square hope that the WIVES don't form an organization.

Girls' Schools Cost Army $1,500,000

National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md., cost the War Department $855,000 and Arlington Hall College, Arlington, Va., cost $650,000, it was revealed yesterday as the War Department's hotel acquisition program won approval of the House Military Affairs Committee.

The program included the leasing of an estimated 475 hotels and the purchase of several others, largely for use as hospitals and training centers for the Army Air Forces.

Seaman Survives Tanker Sinking, Drowns on Jaunt

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 17 (AP).—P. G. Lawson, 19-year-old Merchant Marine seaman, survived the sinking of a tanker in the Atlantic last summer only to drown in Chesapeake Bay while home on a furlough.

He went for a cruise last Friday in a small skiff mounted with sail, going about 12 miles from Westland to Reedsville. Nearing home on the return trip he was overtaken by a severe storm and tied up at a duck blind. The boat was carried away and Lawson apparently attempted to swim ashore and drowned. His body was recovered yesterday.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at White Stone in Lancaster County. Lawson is survived by his parents and one sister, Mrs. June Lawson.

Former Wyoming Congressman Dead

Cody, Wyo., Feb. 17 (AP).—Paul Greever, former United States Representative from Wyoming, was found shot to death in his home yesterday. Sheriff Frank Blackburn said the attorney evidently died accidentally, while cleaning a double-barrel shotgun. The charge struck his head.

Greever served two terms in Congress, being elected in 1934 and reelected in 1936. He was defeated in 1938 by Representative Frank Horton when he sought reelection.

TIMELY PERSONALITIES

Old Friend Tells New Facts on Mme. Chiang

Takoma Park Nurse Was Close Friend of Mme. Chiang; Also, Housekeeper and Companion

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

One person who probably knows more about Mme. Chiang Kai-shek than anyone in Washington is a Takoma Park, Md., nurse. She is Miss Elisabeth Redelstein, supervisor of the hospital at the Washington Sanitarium, who served nearly a year as secretary, housekeeper, nurse and companion to China's first lady, before returning to this country five years ago.

It was while Miss Redelstein was in charge of training at the Shanghai sanitarium, a Seventh-day Adventist institution, that she became a close friend of Mme. Chiang, who was a patient there. When the Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang left Shanghai for Cheng-Tu, the first leg of their trip through China to study conditions on behalf of an anticommunistic campaign, the leaders were in desperate need for a person with the qualifications of Miss Redelstein. Unable to wait for the arrival of an American nurse, they cabled for Miss Redelstein, who was due a vacation at that time. She took a plane, traveling two days for what she thought would be a month's stay with Mme. Chiang, but instead was close to a year living with the great leaders. Except for a Methodist missionary who did secretarial work on the "New Life" movement for Mme. Chiang a couple of months, Miss Redelstein was the only white woman in the household.

Traveling as they did throughout the interior the party was often forced to live amid primitive conditions. No matter how improvised their quarters were, in a hut with wooden boards for walls, no running water and other inconveniences, there was never a complaint or hint of discomfort on the part of Mme. Chiang, the nurse stated. "If something for the good of China could be accomplished despite sacrifices, then Mme. Chiang was ever willing to put up with hardships," she remarked.

Leads a Very Simple Life

On one occasion Miss Redelstein wanted to make some cookies, but informed Mme. Chiang there was no equipment to make them. Turning to the woman Mme. Chiang said "Oh, well, you can probably find something to put them together." They did. The dough mixed in disinfected wash pans with crude implements and a recipe from Miss Redelstein's American cook book was a success. The next afternoon Mme. Chiang herself made a coffee cake under the same difficulties, for their afternoon tea. She enjoyed this bit of domestic work as a form of recreation, Miss Redelstein recalled.

Living a simple life and doing without luxuries as an example to her thousands of countrymen in need, Mme. Chiang sees to it that no funds of the government are spent for things that can bring cheerfulness to their household even to the smallest detail. One instance of this characteristic was brought out when Mme. Chiang and the Generalissimo returned to their home and found fresh cut flowers galore throughout the rooms. After remarking that "flowers must be cheap," Mme. Chiang instructed Miss Redelstein to look into the matter. It was discovered that the servants had gone out and bought the blooms, charging the expense to the government account. Immediately Mme. Chiang had the money refunded from her personal funds.

Feel They Have Definite Mission

Stories have been written, says Miss Redelstein, about a beautiful palace built for the couple in Nanking—that it is exquisitely furnished. This is not true, according to Miss Redelstein, "for I have personally gone through the palace with Mme. Chiang. There is not a stick of furniture in the place." With the exception of a caretaker living there nobody uses the place. Not until China is free and her people have enough to eat will the couple permit thousands of dollars to be spent on furnishings for their home is Mme. Chiang's feelings on the matter, Miss Redelstein pointed out.

"The leading motive in the Chinese couple's lives is based on their Christian faith that God has given them a definite mission to devote their whole life to uplift China," Miss Redelstein declared.

Explaining Mme. Chiang's interest in the youth of her nation in putting before them a program that everyone in China has something to do toward its success, Miss Redelstein said is "outstanding."

"We would often visit schools and participate with them in games and sports to observe their keenness and determine what walk of life they are best suited for. What will be the best in the end is uppermost in their minds before any decision is made," continued Miss Redelstein.

Wife Does Not Dominate Husband

In describing Mme. Chiang's personal living habits the nurse told how her orderly and systematic methods create an atmosphere of restfulness, calmness and peace.

"Although Mme. Chiang is an influence to her husband, by no means does she dominate his moves," said Miss Redelstein.

Both believe in regular sleep—at least eight hours. Unless they have to attend a special function they usually retire at 10 p. m. She loves classical music. Practically all of her recordings are compositions of Bach, Beethoven, Schubert, Mozart and like artists. When time permits she often plays piano; she is fond of walking and loves flowers. As for food she dislikes sweets and rich dishes but much prefers well-balanced meals. Fond of pretty clothes Mme. Chiang feels, however, they are not for a busy woman like herself. One of her biggest enjoyments is Christmas shopping. Each of the 600 children in her orphanage as well as her servants and friends receive gifts which she selects and wraps individually.

Since Mme. Chiang's arrival in this country Miss Redelstein has received four letters from her. Of course she will visit Mme. Chiang in Washington. Born in Germany, Miss Redelstein came to this country in 1911. She speaks French, Chinese, German and English fluently. Her nursing degree was received in Takoma Park at the Washington Sanitarium. Now she is looking forward to return to China, where she has spent 10 years in a country she loves. It is possible she will return to China with Mme. Chiang.

Post Profile — Fernando Saboia

Brazil Secretary Is One of Town's Most Alert Men

Has Been Here For Four Years; Knows America

FERNANDO SABOIA

With a personal history that reads like a novel, a fine intellect and sincere Latin charm, Fernando Saboia de Madeiros, 36-year-old Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, is quietly and modestly emerging as one of the most capable of the younger Washington diplomats. He has been in the United States for four years in the political section of the embassy. Explaining some of the duties he said: "My job entails the writing of detailed reports on the foreign and domestic policies of the United States. I am interested in trends—the Willkies, the Deweys, the Senate and the House, and so forth," he added with a smile.

Not much escapes Mr. Saboia's keen eye; he's a hard worker and keeps late hours. Descended from a long line of advocates, he is the son of Brazil's most distinguished lawyer. Essentially a scholar, he has had a fantastically thorough Jesuit education; speaks, reads and writes six languages and has written six very learned books on varied subjects. In his spare time he studies law at George Washington University.

Back to 'World' After Two Years

Born in Petropolis (Rio's historic summer resort) of an aristocratic, intellectual and pious family, he was sent to a fashionable Jesuit boarding school where, after three years of intensive study, he determined to join the order. At the age of 14 he entered the Jesuit Preparatory School in Sao Paulo, and spent two years as a novitiate. It soon became apparent that he was not suited to the life; the scholastic side in which he excelled appealed to him, but he had a curiosity about the world, and a love of life that he could not stifle. The Jesuit regime was too secluded, too exact, and under the rigorous training his nerves broke completely. "I simply found that I did not have the vocation," explained Mr. Saboia frankly. "The Jesuits were ever so patient with me; I gave the life a long and fair trial but found it impossible to go on."

Returning to the "world" and Rio again, Saboia, then only 24, found himself a misfit. He was completely at sea; he knew no one; because of his cloistered life his interests had been limited, and his health was none too good. At that point his very wise father prescribed a trip to Europe. A diplomatic career became a logical antidote to his former life, and he spent three years abroad. Eight months of each year were spent at the School of Political Science in Paris, and the other four months were spent junketing madly about all over Europe, not only leading the gay life, but learning languages which would serve him in his diplomatic career.

Saboia returned to Brazil a new person, breezed through his Foreign Office examination and became a successful diplomat in Rio. During those first years when he was a consul, third class and second class, he wrote learned treatises on diplomatic matters entitled "Compilation of Diplomatic Cases in Brazilian History, From 1822 to the Present;" "The Liberty of the Navigation of the Amazon" and a treatise on a philosophical Portuguese poet, from notes he had made when he was with the Jesuits. Four years ago Saboia came to the United States to become Second Secretary.

Cultural Trend Still Superficial

On the subject of Brazil and the Good Neighbor Policy he is enthusiastic. "But of course Brazil and the United States are drawing closer together—the collaboration is not merely superficial," he declared with emphasis. "It is a collaboration which will bring permanent and good results." Although he feels that the United States' economic influence is profound, he admits that the cultural influence is still superficial. "Because of the essential difference in temperament, it is difficult to integrate the two cultures; it will take time," Mr. Saboia continued. Obviously, as one who spent a great deal of time in France, he has had reaction from its fall. He continued: "You must remember that for years the other Americas have looked to France for culture. This will not change overnight. However, the events of war and the increased hemisphere solidarity have caused Brazil to grow culturally; there are new creative trends, and intellectual activity is no longer passive." Mr. Saboia supported this statement by mentioning novels that had been written recently on original Brazilian subjects; a new interest on the part of Brazilians in their own history and the development of good Brazilian painters. He feels strongly that the enterprise and optimism of the United States have had a great influence on his country, with good results.

Likes Parties— If They are Small

Life in Washington for Fernando Saboia is interesting and full. Although busy at the embassy and studying law quite seriously on the side, he finds time to entertain a good deal. Reserved, sensitive and essentially shy, he is not fond of mobs of people. He does enjoy dinners of eight in his own fastidiously appointed apartment where he entertains his friends with superb food and drink. A man of definite moods he can be extremely gay, recounting jokes, roaring with laughter and dancing the samba, or he may wax solemn and earnest and discuss the latest Russian battle or an involved political tract. He is fond of American girls, says they are not only good-looking but "understand a man and make good comrades, that is not Latin flattery," he added gleefully.

Soon Mr. Saboia will have been in the United States for five years. At that time he hopes to return to Brazil and then go on to some new and fascinating post. "I shall always have complete admiration for this country and shall so look forward to my return," he concluded, with grace and sincerity.

It's 'China Lady's Day' in Washington; Senator Connally And Representative Bloom Will Be Joint Hosts at Luncheon For Most Famous Living Woman Ever to Visit Capitol Hill

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek will never know how much confusion she caused on Capitol Hill yesterday afternoon.

No, of course, she wasn't there. She hadn't yet arrived in Washington when Senator Tom Connally, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Representative Sol Bloom, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, put their busy heads together and began to polish off plans for the luncheon they will give jointly today for China's First Lady.

The place? Well, that was easy enough to decide. It would be the Foreign Relations Committee room. The guest list? Ah, there was the rub. A few names went on without a quibble, of course. The Vice President, the Speaker of the House, the Senate and House majority and minority leaders. So much for rank. But just how far was rank to go . . . and were wives to be invited? There was the problem. The two prospective hosts remembered the size of the room and viewed with alarm the growing guest list. Senator Connally remembered his attractive wife had expressed more than a passing wish to meet Mme. Chiang, and he wondered if Mrs. Wallace didn't feel the same way about it. What should they do?

Well, to put a long and historic story into a short sentence—plans were completed . . . and the luncheon will take place today just after Mme. Chiang finishes her speech in the House.

The guest list as it now stands, is as follows: Mme. Chiang, Mrs. Roosevelt, the Vice President and Mrs. Wallace, the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei, Senator Alben Barkley, Senator and Mrs. Charles McNary, Senator Arthur Capper, Representative and Mrs. John W. McCormack, Representative Joe Martin, Representative Charles Eaton, Mme. T. V. Soong, sister-in-law of Mme. Chiang; Mrs. Connally, Miss Vera Bloom, and three members of Mme. Chiang's party.

If every woman in Washington is as eager to see Mme. Chiang as I am, Capitol Hill will be one crowded place around noontime today.

Come to think of it, I wonder why so many of us who see celebrities continuously somehow set our hearts on seeing one, especially, and aren't satisfied until we have followed that one around Washington for the duration of their visit. Is it curiosity . . . to see how a famous person conducts himself under the ordeal of meeting Washingtonians by the hundreds; making speeches; being gracious under circumstances that are sometimes trying? Is it because some of us fear that it is only distance that has lent enchantment to personalities we have admired at long range? Or is it because so many of us gain inspiration from being in the presence of a truly great person?

I am sure I don't know . . . but, whatever it is, for more than five years I have wanted to see Mme. Chiang more than any other woman in the world.

Perhaps it is because of her power as First Lady of a country of 450 million inhabitants, nearly a quarter of the population of the globe. Perhaps it is because I have read so many stories about her selfless devotion to less-privileged persons of China, and to her husband, China's Generalissimo. Perhaps it is because as Mei-ling Soong she was educated in this country and then returned to her homeland to make friends and influence converts for the Christianity that prompted her father to study for the Methodist ministry at Trinity College in South Carolina and at Vanderbilt.

Yes, there's definitely a "perhaps" on each of those points, and yet I doubt any quite touches the real reason that I am so eager to see Mme. Chiang Kai-shek. I think it is, rather, because I have heard so many persons who have seen her say, "She is the most charming woman I have ever met."

"And why—or rather, how—is she so charming?" I have asked over and over again.

Only one answer I have had seemed to be an answer at all. The person who gave it met Mme. Chiang in her homeland not too long ago; visited her and the Generalissimo for several days; and, according to his testimony, talked with them at length on a variety of subjects, ranging all the way from what the United States could, and should, do to help China, to plans for Mme. Chiang's current visit here.

"Mme. Chiang is positively the most charming woman I have ever seen," said my informant, by way of getting around to the subject that invariably arises each time her name is mentioned. "Why do I say she is charming?" He thought about that for a few minutes, and then came through with this answer:

"I think it's probably because she talks so little . . . and listens so well. Thinking back over conversations I had with her, it seems I did all the talking, actually . . . but she talks with her eyes; apparently drinks in every word you say. She has a keen sense of humor, too; but you know that more because of her smile and twinkle than because of anything she says. You know," he said. "I think the trouble with most smart women, most witty women, too, is that they talk too much to be charming. Mme. Chiang is charming because, as I said before, she manages to listen a lot more than she talks."

Well, we shall see.

Recently Wed, Bride Is the Former Emmala James of New York

Lieut. and Mrs. Allan Stuart Graham who are now on their honeymoon will make their home in New River, N. C., where Dr. Graham will be on duty at the field hospital at the new Marine base there.

The former Miss Emmala C. James, daughter of Col. and Mrs. William Capers James, and Lieut. Graham, U. S. N. R., son of William S. S. Graham of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and the late Mrs Graham, were married on February 10 at St. Alban's Church. The Rev. Charles T. Warner officiated at the afternoon ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, who has recently returned from duty with the Marine Corps in the southwest Pacific. She wore a gown of ivory tribute satin which was brought from Peking, China, and was made with a long circular train, fitted bodice with sweetheart neckline and long sleeves. Her veil was held by a wreath of orange blossoms and her only ornament was a string of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried a spray of baby gardenias and white lilacs.

Mrs. De Wolf Schatzel, wife of Major Schatzel, U. S. M. C., of Annapolis, was the matron of honor and only attendant, and Dr. Charles Latven, of Arlington, Va., was the best man. Following the ceremony there was a small reception at the Wardman Park Hotel.

When the couple left for their wedding trip to Southern Pines, N. C., the bride was wearing a tailored aqua and brown suit with brown accessories and a leopard coat.

Before reporting to active duty with the Navy in April, 1941, Dr. Graham was resident surgeon at the Flower and Fifth Avenue Hospital in New York. He was graduated from the New York Medical College, Hamilton College and Columbia University.

The bride attended Hannah More Academy near Baltimore, and studied Chinese art and literature in Peking when Colonel James was stationed there with the American Embassy Guard.

Transit Firms Here Held War Industries

". . . the essentiality to the defense effort of the services rendered by the Capital Transit Co. can scarcely be disputed. Without transportation of Government war workers to and from their jobs, the entire defense program would be seriously hampered. This has become especially true since the rationing of tires and gasoline."
